The American Presidency

An Analytical Approach

Irwin L. Morris

University of Maryland, College Park

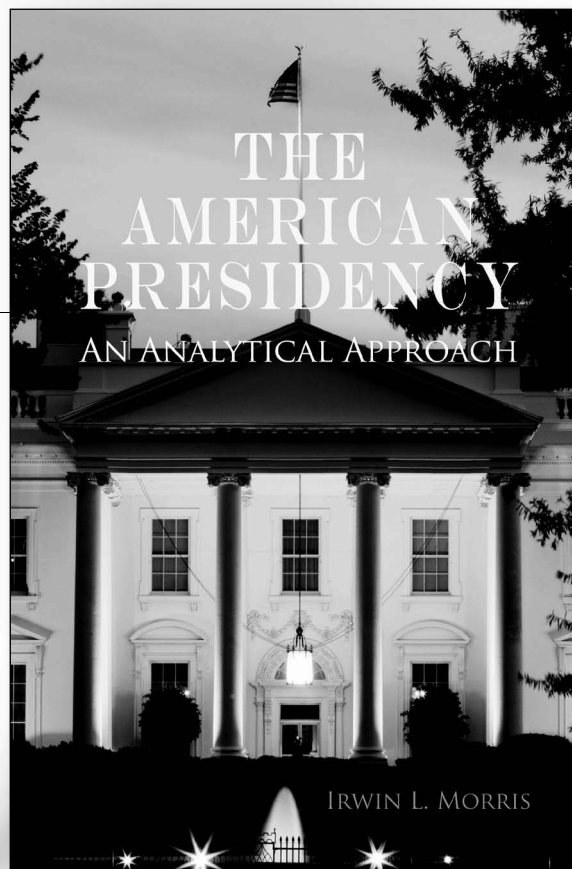

Paperback (ISBN-13: 9780521720434)

15 b/w illus. • 4 tables • 256 pages

August 2010

The American Presidency introduces the scientific study of the presidency while covering topics from theories of presidential power to the president's role in economic policymaking. Like no other text, it presents the latest scholarship on the presidency while providing students with the tools to draw their own reasoned conclusions about the presidency.

- Introduces the scientific approach to presidency research; it shows what scholars know about the presidency and how they know it.
- Includes 'guided research exercises' – straightforward opportunities for students to apply what they have learned about the presidency and social science.

“This book clearly demonstrates how to conduct political science research and challenges readers to tackle political puzzles about the presidency themselves.”

–Brendan J. Doherty, United States Naval Academy

“This is a terrific and frankly much-needed book.

Morris argues that we need to develop and test rigorous theories of the presidency, but he also provides practical guidance and insightful research ideas.

This is a must read for all undergraduate and graduate classes.”

–Richard W. Waterman, University of Kentucky

AFTERSHOCK

The Next Economy and America's Future

by Robert B. Reich

A brilliant reading of the economic crisis and how we should deal with its aftermath. Economic policy maker and political theorist Robert B. Reich suggests that the problem is structural: it lies in the increasing concentration of income and wealth at the top—and a middle class that had to go deeply into debt to maintain a decent standard of living.

MAKING OUR DEMOCRACY WORK

A Judge's View

by Stephen Breyer

Supreme Court Justice Stephen Breyer gives us, for the first time, his original and accessible theory of the United States Supreme Court's responsibility and integrity. One of the few Democrats on the bench, he refutes the strict constructionism advocated by the court's conservatives and he powerfully demonstrates that the influence of our Supreme Court is not historically constant—rather, it has evolved over time, as it continues to do today.

Merrill D. Peterson (1921–2009) was Professor Emeritus of History at the University of Virginia and a noted Jeffersonian scholar.

G. Alan Tarr is Distinguished Professor of Political Science and Director of the Center for State Constitutional Studies at Rutgers University–Camden.

Edited by Merrill D. Peterson

Foreword by G. Alan Tarr

Constitutional conventions are one of the great inventions of American political practice. They provide a means for the populace to debate fundamental issues of government and to craft—or re-craft—a political structure that advances the people’s ideals of democracy and liberty. The federal constitution left many key points of governance to the states, including the structure of their own governments, as long as they were republican in nature. Experimentation continued in the early nineteenth century by means of constitutional conventions both in states newly admitted to the union and in existing states that wished to correct constitutional flaws that had become apparent in the years following the Revolution.

Democracy, Liberty, and Property covers the constitutional conventions convened in New York, Massachusetts, and Virginia in the 1820s to address fundamental policy issues, such as suffrage, legislative apportionment and representation, governmental structures, and freedom of religion. The clash between democracy, liberty, and property is conspicuous in the debates reprinted here. These particular state conventions are significant for their influence over neighboring states’ constitutions and for their cogent debates among such leading statesmen as John Adams, James Madison, James Monroe, and John Marshall, and among less celebrated founders of state constitutions.

The debates focus on enduring issues of liberty and are in many respects as relevant today as they were during the establishment of these states’ constitutions. Modern students and scholars of U.S. history, as well as those interested in the connection between federalism and liberty, will benefit from this collection of original documents and the editor’s introductory essays that provide context for each convention.

GUILT AND DEFENSE

ON THE LEGACIES OF NATIONAL
SOCIALISM IN POSTWAR GERMANY
THEODOR W. ADORNO

EDITED AND TRANSLATED BY
JEFFREY K. OLICK AND ANDREW J. PERRIN

Beginning in 1949, Theodor W. Adorno and other members of the reconstituted Frankfurt Institute for Social Research undertook a massive empirical study of German opinions about the legacies of the Nazis. The study's qualitative results are published here for the first time in English as Guilt and Defense, a psychoanalytically informed analysis of the rhetorical and conceptual mechanisms with which postwar Germans most often denied responsibility for the Nazi past.

THE DISENCHANTMENT OF SECULAR DISCOURSE

STEVEN D. SMITH

Prominent observers complain that public discourse in America is shallow and unedifying. This debased condition is often attributed to, among other things, the resurgence of religion in public life. Steven Smith argues that this diagnosis has the matter backwards: it is not primarily religion but rather the strictures of secular rationalism that have drained our modern discourse of force and authenticity.

ALLIES OF THE STATE

CHINA'S PRIVATE ENTREPRENEURS
AND DEMOCRATIC CHANGE

JIE CHEN AND BRUCE J. DICKSON

Jie Chen and Bruce Dickson draw on extensive fieldwork as they explore the extent to which China's private sector supports democracy, surveying more than 2,000 entrepreneurs in five coastal provinces with over 70 percent of China's private enterprises. The authors examine who the private entrepreneurs are, how the party-state shapes this group, and what their relationship to the state is.

Politics from Princeton

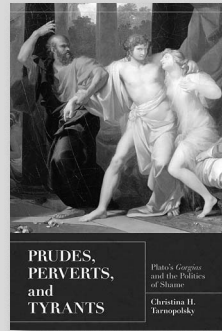

A Dictionary of 20th-Century Communism

Edited by Silvio Pons
& Robert Service

“This important work helps bridge the gap between specialists’ knowledge about communism and the general public’s understanding—a gap that has only widened since the revolutions of 1989–1991. The dictionary’s entries are informative and reasonable, everything one wants in a work such as this.”

Democratic Governance

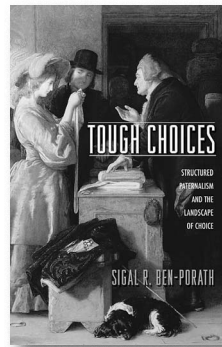

Mark Bevir

“Democratic Governance is a highly original, broad-ranging, and ambitious book that makes distinctive contributions to democratic theory, the sociology of knowledge, and public policy. Its major contribution is to show how relatively abstract social theories have informed, down to the details, agendas of political, administrative, and policy reform.”

NEW BOOK FROM THE CATO INSTITUTE

“The authors and outlooks collected in this volume represent the clearest, most realistic, most penetrating thought about America’s response to terrorist threats. The wider the audience is for views like these, the closer the country will come to an effective policy for protecting its people.”

— JAMES FALLOWS,
National Correspondent, The Atlantic Monthly

Terrorizing Ourselves explores disciplined approaches to terrorism and dismantles the flawed thinking that dominates today’s national security policy. It exposes how politicians manipulate fear for political purposes and shows how anxiety about terrorism is driving military adventurism, exploding the national debt, militarizing domestic affairs, and shifting expenditures away from other urgent priorities.

TENURED OR TENURE TRACK FACULTY POSITION (OPEN RANK)

The Annenberg School for Communication (ASC) at the University of Pennsylvania is seeking to fill a tenured or tenure track faculty position (open rank) to begin fall semester 2011. Research and teaching should focus on the political economy of the media. In particular we are interested in scholars with an empirically-grounded critical orientation; i.e., empirical research on the roles that economic and political power play in the structure of media systems, government and industrial policies, and/or the creation and circulation of media materials. An interest in emerging media and/or global communication is also preferred.

Applicants must hold a Ph.D. (in communication or a related discipline) and have a strong record of teaching and research. Responsibilities include conducting a program of research and publication, teaching at the graduate and undergraduate levels including supervising doctoral dissertations, and contributing service to the school and university.

The Annenberg School for Communication at the University of Pennsylvania is a graduate school of communication theory and research, with 18 full-time faculty and approximately 90 doctoral students representing a wide range of disciplinary backgrounds and interests. The faculty also has primary responsibility for an undergraduate communication major within the School of Arts and Sciences.

Send letter of interest, curriculum vitae, three names of references, and up to three articles, chapters or other representative samples of your research to Professor Michael X. Delli Carpini, Dean, Annenberg School for Communication, University of Pennsylvania, 3620 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, PA 19104-6220. To receive full consideration, applications should be received by September 15 2010. The University of Pennsylvania is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer committed to diversity.

2010–2011 Call for Applications

Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Scholars in Health Policy Research

Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Scholars in Health Policy Research program helps to develop a new generation of creative health policy thinkers and researchers within the disciplines of economics, political science and sociology. Each year, the program selects up to nine highly qualified individuals for two-year fellowships at one of three nationally prominent universities with the expectation that they will make important research contributions to future U.S. health policy.

The participating universities are: Harvard University; the University of California, Berkeley and San Francisco; and the University of Michigan.

Applicants who expect to begin training in August 2011 must be U.S. citizens or permanent residents at the time of application and have received a doctoral degree after January 1, 2006 but no later than July 2011. For those applicants who expect to receive degrees in 2011, all degree requirements must be completed by July 15, 2011.

Application Deadline
October 13, 2010

The complete call for applications is available on the Foundation's Web site at www.rwjf.org/cfp/scholarsinhealthpolicyresearch and the program's Web site at www.healthpolicyscholars.org or by calling (617) 353-9220.

About the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation focuses on the pressing health and health care issues facing our country. As the nation's largest philanthropy devoted exclusively to improving the health and health care of all Americans, we work with a diverse group of organizations and individuals to identify solutions and achieve comprehensive, meaningful and timely change.

For more than 35 years we've brought experience, commitment and a rigorous, balanced approach to the problems that affect the health and health care of those we serve. When it comes to helping Americans lead healthier lives and get the care they need, we expect to make a difference in your lifetime.

APSA task forces expand public understanding of political science by applying political science research and knowledge to tackle critical public policy questions. The task forces disseminate political science perspectives on important trends and issues of public concern in digested report form and, often, publish larger volumes with complete research findings for the discipline. For more on APSA Task Forces, visit www.apsanet.org/taskforces/.

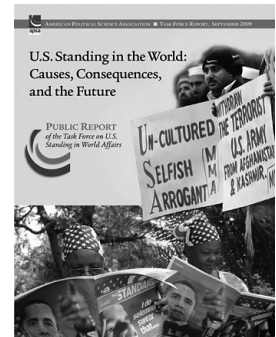

Interdisciplinarity: Its Role in a Discipline-Based Academy (2009)

This summary report of the APSA Task Force on Interdisciplinarity focuses on procedural aspects of interdisciplinary practices currently in use, including incentives, organizational structures, and techniques to educate students and scholars to work effectively in interdisciplinary approaches. The intent is to provide a guide to promising innovations that have worked well, rather than to judge which ones might be the best. Best practices are presented from a wide range of academic fields and institutions. The report is intended to be helpful to a wide range of academicians, including researchers and teachers, and the directors of institutional structures that shape the research and teaching environment. ($5 list; bulk rates available).

U.S. Standing in the World: Causes, Consequences, and the Future (2009)

America's global standing has become a central concern of U.S. leaders and citizens. U.S. leaders, regardless of party, pledge to "restore U.S. standing" as a central goal of America's foreign policy agenda. Standing has been the subject of widespread public discussion and intellectual debate. The report of the Task Force on U.S. Standing in World Affairs answers these questions by synthesizing what we now know about U.S. standing and/or identifying what we need to know to understand better a topic of clear national and international importance. ($5 list; bulk rates available).

The Persistent Problem: Inequality, Difference, and the Challenge of Development (2008)

This report from the APSA Task Force on Difference, Inequality, and Developing Societies highlights the complex, multidimensional nature of inequality in the era of globalization, and documents that despite the impressive strides by nations like China and India, absolute inequality between the richest and poorest countries is greater than ever before in history. The report's central argument is that under conditions of high inequality, elites—both international and within individual nations—may create socially suboptimal institutions and policies, and they may resist changes that promote development but threaten their dominance. ($5 list; bulk rates available).

American Democracy in an Age of Inequality (2004)

Equal political voice and democratically responsive government are widely cherished American ideals. Indeed, the United States vigorously promotes democracy abroad. Yet, what is happening to democracy at home? Our country's ideals of equal citizenship and responsive government may be under growing threat in an era of persistent and rising inequalities. Disparities of income, wealth, and access to opportunity are growing more sharply in the United States than in many other nations, and gaps between races and ethnic groups persist. This report describes how progress toward realizing American ideals of democracy may have stalled, and in some arenas, reversed. ($5 list; bulk rates available).

Centennial Center for Political Science & Public Affairs Research Opportunities in Washington, D.C.

I enjoyed my stay in Washington D.C. immensely, and the high quality facilities and friendly staff at the Centennial Center made it a great base from which to conduct my fieldwork. I found the facilities to be well located making it easy to travel to my interviews and use the National Security Archive at GWU. Coming to Washington as an international scholar, I found it helpful when securing key interviews to have the support of such a respected organization.

— Emma Briant, University of Glasgow

Created in celebration of the American Political Science Association centennial, the Centennial Center for Political Science and Public Affairs encourages research, writing, and collaboration among scholars working within the discipline.

The Center, located in Association headquarters in D.C., assists scholars from the United States and abroad whose research and teaching could benefit from a stay in and access to the incomparable resources in the nation's capital. The Center has space for ten visiting scholars for extended periods of time ranging from a few weeks to a year.

The Center features:

- personal work space
- computer, high-speed internet, and wireless
- personal phone, fax, and printing
- flexible scheduling for long and short stays
- convenient downtown location, metro accessible
- meeting and conference room facilities
- reference library
- night and weekend access
- community of scholars
- access to: U.S. government, Library of Congress, National Archives, World Bank, International Monetary Fund, USAID, national party headquarters, embassies from around the world, Organization of American States, etc.

Funding Opportunities

As a result of generous contributions by members and friends, APSA developed endowments for grant programs that may support stays at the Centennial Center.

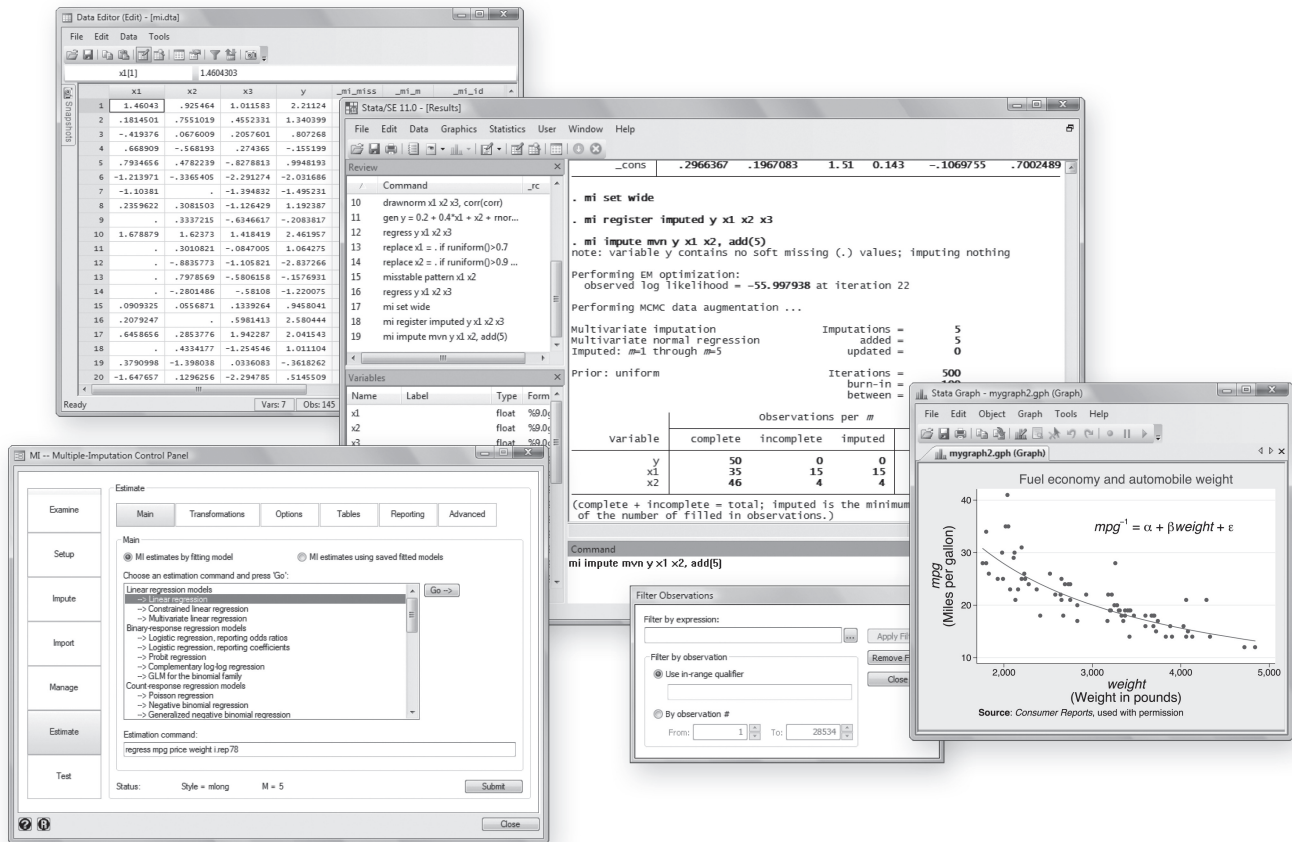

Applications may be submitted throughout the year and will be reviewed on a rolling basis. If you would like to be considered for funding, it is recommended that you apply before February 28.
