LONDON TRADESMEN'S CARDS OF THE XVIII CENTURY

AN ACCOUNT OF THEIR ORIGIN AND USE

BY

AMBROSE HEAL

Illustrated by upwards of 100 full-plate collotype reproductions of typical specimens

CONSIDERING the intrinsic interest and often great artistic merit of the Tradesmen's Cards of the eighteenth century, it is a remarkable fact that no work should hitherto have been devoted to their history.

This want of a special work on the subject has long been felt, and Mr. Ambrose Heal has now met it by the preparation of the present volume, which will contain the results of a long and intimate study of this fascinating subject.

Apart from their artistic qualities, the Trade Cards of the eighteenth century possess marked historical, topographical, and heraldic interest, for they not only indicate the wares dealt in by the tradesmen of a past day, but frequently portray the actual shops where the objects were procurable, while in many of the earlier examples is shown the trader's sign which hung out before each shop down to the year 1762, when the numbering of the houses in London's streets became fairly general.

From a monetary point of view these Cards are rapidly becoming more and more valuable, but many of them are still within the reach of collectors of moderate means, and this book should prove of the greatest interest to such, as well as an incitement to others to preserve these beautiful mementos of a time when trade and artistry so often went hand in hand.

To topographers and students of costume the value of the subjects is equally obvious, for by their aid it is possible to identify the position of the shops of the eighteenth-century tradesmen, and follow the changes in fashion of the costume throughout the Georgian reigns.

The format of the work will be Crown Quarto (10 × 7 inches), finely printed on special paper, and bound in antique style. It will be issued to Subscribers at £1 15s. net. On publication, the price will be raised to £2 2s. net.

As the edition will be limited, intending Subscribers are advised to place their orders without delay as it is probable that the work will quickly go out of print.

An illustrated prospectus will be forwarded free on application to the publishers:—
