EDUCATION AND PRODUCTIVE SOCIETY

EDITED BY DR. H. R. ZIEL

1965

As a result of the urgings of governments, industries, philosophers, and various social institutions, that educators be alert to the exponential changes occurring in our productive society, a conference of decision-making personnel in vocational and technical education throughout Canada was held at the University of Alberta in 1964.

This book is a collection of the papers appearing at the conference, along with the resulting comments. They present a jarring note to the rapid change shaping our educational system, our society, and the need for a more realistic and effective program of education if mankind is to be the master of technology. 217 pages. $5.50

THE CHRISTIAN EXISTENTIALIST
The Philosophy and Theology of Self-Fulfillment in Modern Society

by Bernard Haring, C. Ss. R.

The Deems Lectureship in Philosophy

“Personalism and existentialism, as I understand them, integrate essential values of our common Christian and humanitarian tradition, but in their specific forms they reflect the most vital experiences, the hopes and the fears, of mankind in our time. The personalism that confronts the reader here is neither abstract idealistic thinking about person and freedom nor a mere pragmatic response to the burning questions of our pluralistic society. ... It is intended as a challenge and an appeal to modern man to care above all for the wholeness of the human person and the meaningfulness and integrity of interpersonal relationships.” The Author.

CLARK

Zwingli's
Theocracy

ROBERT C. WALTON

Zwingli has long been the subject of much academic and religious speculation: in this study Professor Walton discusses what he believes to be the wrong conclusions regarding Zwingli's concept of religion and government. His research reveals discrepancies between the findings reached by secondary works on Zwingli and what Zwingli himself said and did. Based on Zwingli's own writings, this close and well-documented study offers a clear and accurate guide to the understanding of Zwingli's thought.

THE IDENTITY THEORY

C. F. Presley

OF MIND

What is the relationship between the mental and the physical? Does the Identity Theory—that mental states are, as a matter of contingent fact, identical with states of the brain—provide a satisfactory answer?

This is the focal point of this series of papers presented by prominent philosophers from Australian Universities at the Annual Congress of the Australasian Association of Philosophy in 1964. Professor Presley of the University of Queensland provides a unifying introduction to a book which may well be used as a basis for the critical examination of the Identity Theory of Mind.

CONSEQUENCES OF UTILITARIANISM

A Study in Normative Ethics and Legal Theory, by D. H. HODGSON. A study of various aspects of utilitarianism as they relate to certain concepts of law, in which the author concludes by proposing a resolution to the conflict between 'legalistic' and 'moralistic' views of the judicial decision. $5.95.

THE THEORY OF UNIVERSALS

Second Edition, by R. I. AARON. For this edition the whole of Chapter VI and large parts of Chapters VII and XI have been rewritten. In 1952 when the first edition appeared it was widely questioned whether the problem of universals was a serious philosophical problem, and it appeared necessary at that time to begin Part II with a chapter entitled 'Is there a real problem?' Today this is no longer necessary; instead, the author begins by explaining his approach to Part II. In Chapters VII and XI fresh accounts of general words and concepts are presented. Minor corrections only have been made in Part I. Further references have been added in Parts I and II. $7.00.
