Soviet Policy in the Far East 1944–1951

By MAX BELOFF, author of The Foreign Policy of Soviet Russia.

This comprehensive survey of Russia and the Far East is one of the most important books yet written on this period. It includes an excellent introduction to the whole problem of international relations in that area, as well as a balanced, thoroughly documented account of events from the Yalta Agreement and its implications up to the beginning of the Korean truce talks. Published for the Royal Institute of International Affairs.

Russia: What Next?

By ISAAC DEUTSCHER, author of Stalin: A Political Biography.

"One of the writers best qualified through his career and his studies to interpret the recent changes in the Soviet Union has now given his view on what the world may expect from Malenkov . . . a remarkable opus. It makes stimulating reading regardless of whether or not one agrees with the author."—ERNEST S. PISCO, Christian Science Monitor. "Excellent writing and highly readable . . . a serious and stimulating contribution to the study of a subject whose importance for western civilization is greater than most Westerners imagine."—GEORGE F. KENNAN, The Reporter.

Modern Russian Literature

From Chekhov to the Present

By MARC SLONIM.

"A big, comprehensive guidebook to the writing—mainly of this century—in which the Russian mind is revealed and in terms of which it may be examined. The coverage is wide; literally hundreds of writers and thousands of books are discussed . . . all of them with the quiet and precise authority which suggests both firm scholarship and warm human understanding."—RICHARD SULLIVAN, Chicago Tribune.

The Epic of Russian Literature

From Its Origins through Tolstoy

Also by MARC SLONIM.

"Excellent . . . exciting reading, and at the same time the author has avoided the pitfalls of a dogmatically one-sided interpretation."—MICHAEL KARPOVICH, N. Y. Times Book Review. "A distinguished performance, the rich result of many years of scholarly effort."—ERNEST J. SIMMONS, N. Y. Herald Tribune.

A HISTORY OF

in two volumes

V. V. ZENKOVSKY, Translated by GEORGE L. KLINE. This, the first complete history of Russian philosophy in any language (it contains material not in the Russian original as published), has been widely acclaimed as the most readable and reliable yet written. The English translation, including the author's latest revisions and additions, is written in a clear, direct style, with a minimum of technical terminology. The author's sensitive but dispassionate treatment of the views of Russian philosophers is based on an extensive study of sources not generally available in Western languages.

"The second volume fully justifies the expectations aroused in the reader by the first volume. . . . The book as a whole must be regarded as an outstanding phenomenon."—D. I. Chizhevski in Novy Zhurnal.

A MODERN CZECH GRAMMAR

WILLIAM E. HARKINS, Assisted by MARIE HNYKOVA

This all-purpose elementary Czech grammar for college students has several unique features. Because it requires a vocabulary of only 1,200 words, it can be used by students without a Slavic background. Czech sentence order and verbs are treated far more completely than heretofore, and there are more exercises than in any other existing Czech grammar. Designed for self-study, the grammar contains an index of derivative forms not found in dictionaries. A King's Crown Press publication. $4.50

SOVIET NATIONAL INCOME AND PRODUCT IN 1937

ABRAM BERGSON. This penetrating theoretical economic analysis calculates the national income and product of the Soviet Union in 1937, giving new and deep insights into its economy. The author, using all available sources, sets up a new methodology for analyzing such statistics. "This study is probably the most significant work on the Soviet economy that has been written so far in English."—Alexander Gerschenkron, Professor of Economics, Harvard University. $3.75

THROUGH THE GLASS OF SOVIET LITERATURE
Views of Russian Society

ERNEST J. SIMMONS, Editor. These six studies of different aspects of Soviet literature express a new approach to an understanding of significant phases of Soviet society. Highly readable and informative, they show phases of Russian society reflected in Soviet literature since the Revolution of 1917. These phases are: controls over literature, the Marxian woman, Jews, children's drama, Soviet satirists, and postwar literary scholarship. $4.50

THE PROLETARIAN EPISODE IN RUSSIAN LITERATURE 1928-1932

EDWARD J. BROWN examines the proletarian literary movement in Russia—particularly the Russian Association of Proletarian Writers. He discusses the group's literary theory, the kind of literature it produced, its effect on Russian literature, and the reasons it was liquidated. $4.50

MANAGEMENT OF THE INDUSTRIAL FIRM IN THE USSR
A Study in Soviet Economic Planning

DAVID GRANICK'S study of how the Soviet planning system integrates the thousands of industrial plants in the USSR shows that plant managers have greater entrepreneurial powers than is generally supposed. He analyzes the role of top management, showing where plant executives play a direct role, describing their characteristics as a group, their special problems, and the institutional structure within which they work. $5.00

SOVIET ECONOMIC GROWTH CONDITIONS AND PERSPECTIVES

Edited by Abram Bergson, Professor of Economics and Staff Member, Russian Institute, Columbia University

The results of intensive researches into the Soviet economy by 31 Western scholars

A symposium that

(1) traces in systematic detail the rates and patterns of growth of the Soviet economy as a whole during the years preceding and following the Second World War;

(2) applies known facts about Soviet economic trends toward an examination and appraisal of the future prospects of the Soviet economy.

The results of this research are presented in separate studies, each containing the most up-to-date authentic information available on the economy of the U.S.S.R. Much of this information is the result of many years' work, e.g., the chapters on "Capital Formation and Allocation," "Population," "Transportation," "Industrial Production," and "Industrial Labor Productivity," each of which represents at least one-and-one-half years of research now available for the first time.

Here is invaluable reading for economists, foreign service personnel, and for university courses in Soviet economy and comparative economic systems.

Contributors include: Edward Ames; Dr. Abram Bergson; Joseph Berliner; James Blackman; Janet Chapman; Prof. M. Gardner Clark; Prof. George Cressey; Prof. Evsey Domar; Warren W. Eason; Alexander Erlich; Prof. Walter Galenson; Prof. Alexander Gerschenkron; Gregory Grossman; Prof. Chauncy Harris; Leon Herman; Hans Heymann, Jr.; Prof. Donald Hodgman; Prof. Oleg Hoefding; Prof. Holland Hunter; Norman Kaplan; Dr. Joseph Kershaw; Prof. Wassily Leontief; Prof. Frank Lorimer; Prof. Max. Millikan; Richard Moorsteen; Nicholas W. Rodin; Prof. Harry Schwartz; D. B. Shimkin; Dr. Nicolas Spulber; Prof. V. B. Timoshenko; Lazar Volin.

The Origins of Soviet-American Diplomacy

By ROBERT PAUL BROWDER. An absorbing narrative of the events which led up to the dramatic arrival of Litvinov in Washington in 1933, and of the collapse into discord and disillusion which was to follow. This first full-length account of the negotiations presents a new picture of the pressures that existed for and against diplomatic recognition of the Soviet Union.
