THE BRITISH INSTITUTE OF PHILOSOPHY MESSAGE TO READERS

DURING the war, the Institute has succeeded both in publishing its Journal regularly, even though reduced somewhat in size and frequency of issue; and in providing a minimum of lectures on topics of philosophy. Now that the war in Europe is over, it is desired, as soon as possible, not only to restore the Journal to its original format and number of issues, but also to arrange lectures and meetings on a gradually increasing scale. Readers of the Journal will be aware that the war has inevitably reduced the income of the Institute, whilst at the same time increasing its cost of production by approximately 75 per cent. In order, therefore, that generous services may be provided to those interested in philosophical matters, it is clearly necessary that the income of the Institute should be considerably augmented. This can only be done through an increase in membership and by donations and bequests.

The Editor desires to express his gratitude to members and readers of the Journal who have already responded to his earlier note, and hopes that their example will be widely followed.

EDITOR.
