The Politics of Population in Brazil
ELITE AMBIVALENCE AND PUBLIC DEMAND

By Peter McDonough and Amaury DeSouza

A tenfold population increase in the past 100 years precipitates this examination of the attitudes toward population planning of Brazilian government officials and other elites in comparison with mass public opinion. This study is noteworthy not only for its original approach incorporating mass and elite data and departing from standard concerns with fertility, but also for its sophisticated methodology and lucid presentation.

Contemporary Mexican Painting
in a Time of Change

By Shifra M. Goldman

This book is the first to deal in detail with contemporary Mexican art after World War II and, in particular, with the important movement of the early 1960s known as Nueva Presencia. It is based on personal interviews with artists and critics, as well as extensive archival research. Goldman analyzes the socio-political context of contemporary Mexican art and the conflicting currents of nationalism and internationalism, in addition to the aesthetic qualities of the works of the sixteen artists most involved in Nueva Presencia.

Mobility and Integration in Urban Argentina
CÓRDOBA IN THE LIBERAL ERA

By Mark D. Szuchman

This study is a ground-breaking analysis of Argentina's radical alteration of social and economic patterns resulting from the great influx of European immigrants in the late 1800s and early 1900s. The author examines the occupational, residential, educational, and economic patterns of mobility of some four thousand men, women, and children who resided in Córdoba, Argentina's most important interior city, during this changeable era.

Volume V

THIRD PALENQUE ROUND TABLE, 1978

PART 2

Edited by Merle Greene Robertson

The four previous volumes published as a result of the Palenque Round Tables have become essential tools for all serious students of the ancient Maya. With Volume V, the second publication to emerge from the 1978 meeting, the University of Texas Press assumes publication of the series. This particular volume emphasizes art, architecture, hieroglyphic decipherment, and mythology; regionally, Bonampak and Palenque are prominent. Illustrated in detail with line drawings and photographs.

Ritual Kinship

The Structure and Historical Development of the Compadrazgo System in Rural Tlaxcala

Hugo G. Nutini and Betty Bell

One of the most crucial institutions in Latin America, compadrazgo provides—through the link of a person, an object, or an occasion—a basic social bond among people that plays much the same role as kinship in tribal societies. Although this “ritual kinship” is wide-spread, it remains poorly understood with regard to its implications and the context in which it is found. Focusing on the community of Santa María Belén in rural Tlaxcala, Nutini and Bell present a definitive study of compadrazgo as it affects an entire region in the Central Mexican Highlands. THE UNITED STATES AND THE CARIBBEAN, 1900-1970

Lester D. Langley

Mr. Langley organizes his study around the idea of an American empire, originating in the fundamental assessment of the Caribbean's strategic importance at the turn of the century and expressed later in the political, economic, and cultural impact of Americans on the Caribbean world. He traces the development of United States-Caribbean relations from the days when Woodrow Wilson intervened directly in Caribbean affairs to the 1960s when the once compliant Caribbean republics began to defy America's power.

STRUGGLE FOR THE AMERICAN MEDITERRANEAN

United States-European Rivalry in the Gulf-Caribbean, 1776-1904

"Langley constructs his fascinating story of the struggle for the American Mediterranean in prose which is clear, concise, smooth flowing, and cultured. His colossal command and use of such a wealth of first class sources in one volume has put students, scholars and laymen alike, in his debt by giving them, as it were, a shortcut to these extensive sources and relieving them of the arduous bibliographical reading he has done."—Modern Age.

The Army and Politics in Argentina, 1945–1962

Perón to Frondizi

Robert A. Potash. Continuing the detailed examination of the political role of the Argentine Army that was begun in the author's The Army and Politics in Argentina, 1928–1945: Yrigoyen to Perón, this book deals with the nearly ten-year presidency of General Juan D. Perón, the three-year military regime known as the Liberating Revolution, and the truncated civilian government of Dr. Arturo Frondizi. A principal focus is on the changing relationships between the nation's political leaders and officers of the Army and Navy. A concluding chapter treats military politics since 1962. São Paulo in the Brazilian Federation, 1889–1937

Joseph L. Love. This study of Brazilian regionalism from the beginning of the Republic to the establishment of Getulio Vargas's Estado Novo in 1937 focuses on the key region of São Paulo. São Paulo's story is one of rapid economic expansion, first in agriculture and then in manufacturing. Its political elites—relying on massive exports and foreign borrowing—pioneered in state intervention in society and the economy, and in the process confused the interests of São Paulo with their own. A Jesuit Hacienda in Colonial Mexico

Santa Lucía, 1576–1767

Herman W. Konrad. Haciendas were the major link between rural and urban life in colonial Mexico, shaping the fortunes of people in all social classes. This two-hundred year history details the nature and operation of one of the largest and most prosperous: the Jesuit hacienda of Santa Lucía. The author describes the founding of the estate, examines its inner workings and management, surveys the character of life on the hacienda, and offers new insights into the institution of the hacienda and colonial society. NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

MICHAEL WALLERSTEIN is a graduate student in the Department of Political Science at the University of Chicago. He is currently working on a formal model of the structure of class conflict in democratic regimes.

WERNER BAER is Professor of Economics at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. He recently published The Brazilian Economy: Its Growth and Development (1979).

JOSEPH L. LOVE is Professor of History at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. He is the author of Rio Grande do Sul and Brazilian Regionalism and São Paulo and the Brazilian Federation.

JOYCE WADDELL BAILEY has lectured widely in the U.S. and Puerto Rico as an art consultant and has taught Latin American art history in the five-college program at Mt. Holyoke College. Her forthcoming book, Madero and the Pictorial Press, is based on research completed as a Tinker Post-Doctoral Fellow. She is currently Planning Editor for the Handbook of Latin American Art.

DENNIS CONWAY is Assistant Professor of Geography at Indiana University, Bloomington. The research for this article, in part, was supported by a fellowship from the Organization of American States. His research interests include migration and development relationships in Latin America and the Caribbean, and he is currently involved in the organization of a Venezuelan migration project.

JOHN M. KIRK is Assistant Professor of Spanish at Dalhousie University. In addition to translating and editing an anthology of Latin American revolutionary poetry, he has published studies on the narrative of contemporary Mexico (José Agustín) and Cuba (Carpentier), and on the work of José Martí.

EDMUND STEPHEN URBANSKI is an active member of the Inter-American Council. In the last few years, he has served as consultant to the U.S. Navy, Atlantic Command's PACE Program, as Visiting Professor at the University of Warsaw, Poland, and at the Universidade Federal do Paraná, Curitiba. His latest book, Hispanic America and Its Civilizations: Spanish Americans and Anglo-Americans, was recently issued by the University of Oklahoma Press.

ROBERTO GONZÁLEZ ECHEVARRÍA, a senior member of the faculty of Yale University, teaches Spanish and Latin American literature. He is the author of Alejo Carpentier: The Pilgrim at Home and Relecturas: ensayos de literatura cubana. He is presently at work on a book on the interrelation of the concept of culture and the idea of literature in modern Latin America and a study of Calderón's La vida es sueño.
