

Stanley Renshon, professor of political science, The City University of New York, is on sabbatical for 1995 and has been appointed Visiting Scholar at the John F. Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University. Renshon will be working with the school's leadership development project on curriculum to improve the quality of decision judgment for public policy developers and decision makers.

Awards

MacArthur Grants Awarded

The John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation has awarded nineteen research and writing grants to twenty-three scholars and writers from the U.S. and around the world. The grants, totaling almost $900,000, are intended to support these individual scholars studying issues of peace and international cooperation.

The research and writing grants, which are part of the Foundation's Program on Peace and International Cooperation, are designed to encourage analysts to explore international issues and to seek out innovative approaches to new policy dilemmas emerging in the rapidly changing world arena. The grants are open to individuals of any nationality who have a proven ability to do creative work; recipients have included scholars, journalists, and practitioners, among others.

The grants range up to $65,000 for individuals or $100,000 for a two-person team, and extend up to eighteen months in duration. Recipients may carry out research at the institution or location of their choice. There are no age, academic affiliation, or geographic restrictions on recipients.

The purpose of the grants is to serve the following goals:

- To broaden and strengthen the community of scholars and writers engaged in policy-oriented work on international peace and security.
- To encourage the reconceptualization of security issues in light of changing international events, and to encourage attention to new developments that have not been adequately understood as peace and security issues.

- To foster integrated consideration of emerging relationships among economic, social, political, technological, and environmental aspects of global change.

The twenty-three grant winners are:

Nancy Barnes, Maputo, Mozambique

Anne F. Bayefsky, University of Ottawa

Ms. Pascale M. Combelles, Blagnac, France

Beth Osborne Daponte and Timothy Coté, University of Pittsburgh and National Institutes of Health

Haleh Esfandiari, Potomac, Maryland

Jonathan Fox, Massachusetts Institute of Technology

Warren Goldstein, Amherst, Massachusetts

Gennady Gorelik, Massachusetts Institute of Technology

Katrin Jellema, Grand Haven, Michigan

Michael T. Klare, Hampshire College

Nathalie Lebon, University of Florida

Thabane Vincent Maphai, University of Western Cape

Judith Matloff, Johannesburg, South Africa

R.T. Naylor, McGill University

Kevin J. O'Brien and Lianjiang Li, Ohio State University and Nankai University

Yezid Sayigh, Oxford, UK

Beth Stephens, Center for Constitutional Rights, New York, New York

Susan Willett and Peter Batchelor, Kings College, London, UK

Snjezana Krezo and Dusko Ilic, Sibenik, Croatia and Tokyo, Japan

1995 Pi Sigma Alpha Award

Stephen Horn, United States Representative from California's 38th District and a political scientist with over thirty-five years of experience as a participant in national policy making and service as a scholar, teacher, and university administrator, has received the National Capital Area Political Science Association 1995 Pi Sigma Alpha Award. The award, recognizing the outstanding contributions of a political scientist to public service, was presented March 25, 1995, at Mount Vernon College.

Prior to his election to Congress in 1992, Representative Horn served as Trustee Professor of Political Science at California University, Long Beach, with a specialty in the legislative process. Congressman Horn's career began as a political appointee in the Eisenhower administration, where he was Administrative Assistant to Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell. He then served for five years as Legislative Assistant to Senator Thomas H. Kuchel of California, who at the time was Deputy Republican Leader (Whip) of the U.S. Senate. During that time, he worked on major legislation, including the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Voting Rights Act of 1965, Medicare, and water policy for the western states.

Congressman Horn has also been a Senior Fellow at the Brookings Institution and Dean of Graduate Studies and Research at The American University. From 1970–1988, he served as President of California State University, Long Beach. In addition, he served part-time for sixteen years as a founding member and past chair of The National Institute of Corrections of the U.S. Department of Justice, and for thirteen years as a member and Vice Chair of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

Carrie Chapman Catt Prize for Research

Cheryl Logan Sparks, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill was awarded the Carrie Chapman Prize for Research for "How Grandmother Won the War: Strategic and Organizational Lessons from the Struggle for Suffrage." Lisa Young, University of Toronto and Visiting Fulbright Scholar at American University received honorable mention for "The Relationship between Women's Movements and Political Parties: A Canadian-American Comparison.”

Other Awards

Mark Cichock, associate professor of political science, University of Texas at Arlington, was nominated by the College of Liberal Arts for the Chancellor's Teaching Award for 1993–94.

Charles W. Dunn, professor of political science, Clemson University, received the first annual Michelin Award for Excellence in Teaching. The Award, funded by the Michelin Tire Corporation, includes an all-expenses-paid trip to Europe. The Clemson University student government unanimously chose Dunn to receive the Michelin Award.

Charles W. Dunn

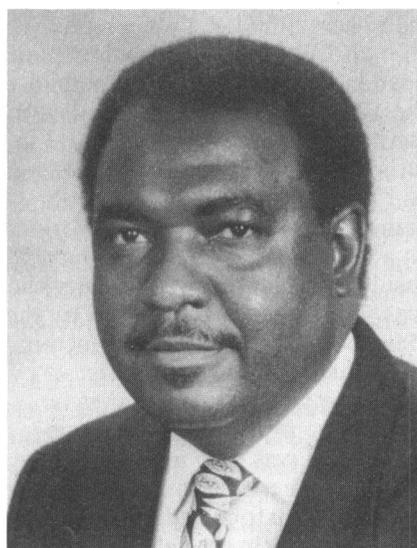

Joseph A. Ignagni, assistant professor of political science, University of Texas at Arlington, has been named an outstanding teacher at UTA and nominated by the university College of Liberal Arts for the Minnie Piper Teaching Award for 1993–94.

Douglas W. Lemke, department of political science, Florida State University, has been awarded the Walter Isard Award for the Best Dissertation in Peace Science, 1992–1994, given by the Peace Science Society at its annual meeting in November 1994.

John Leslie, Washington, DC, has been awarded a Robert Bosch Foundation Fellowship for 1995–1996. Leslie will join 14 other young American professionals in full-time internships in Germany during the nine month program.

Deena Abu-Lughod, department of political science, New School for Social Research, has been awarded a Fulbright grant to complete field research in Nicaragua. Abu-Lughod will be working on her dissertation entitled, “Land Reform from Below: 1979–1994.”

Huey L. Perry, dean, school of public policy and urban affairs, and professor, department of political science, Southern University-Baton Rouge, has been awarded a $150,000 research grant from the Political Science Program of the National Science Foundation to conduct a three-year study on the impact of black participation in urban politics. The study will examine impact of black political participation on the governmental allocation of benefits to blacks in 14 cities: Atlanta, Birmingham, Charlotte, Chicago, Dallas, Houston, Kansas City, KS, Los Angeles, Miami, Mobile, New Orleans, New York, Richmond, and San Antonio.

Huey L. Perry

David Pion-Berlin, associate professor of political science, University of California-Riverside, has been awarded a Fulbright grant under the American Republics Research Program. Pion-Berlin will be conducting field research in Chile and Uruguay as part of a book-length study of civil-military relations in the Latin American Cone.

Gregory A. Raymond

Gregory A. Raymond, professor of political science, Boise State University, was selected as the 1994 Idaho Professor of the Year by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. Raymond has been the recipient of Boise State's Outstanding Researcher Award (1994), Outstanding Teacher Award (1985), and Distinguished Faculty (1989).

In Memoriam

Paul L. Beckett

Paul L. Beckett, professor emeritus at Washington State University, died in Pullman on January 9, 1995 at the age of 81.

In his native Illinois he attended the Roseville public schools, earned a baccalaureate degree in English at Monmouth College, and was awarded an M.A. in political science by the University of Illinois. He completed his doctoral work at the University of California, Los Angeles in 1949.

His first full-time teaching position was at the University of New Mexico. In 1947 he joined the fac-