

CORRIGENDUM

The Importance of local party activity in understanding Canadian politics: Winning from the ground up in the 2015 federal election – CORRIGENDUM

William Cross

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1017/S0008423916000962>, Published by Cambridge University Press, 4 November 2016.

Some of the data reported by Cross (2016) on page 615 of the original article were incorrect. The correct data are as follows: 62 per cent of associations with a woman president had a woman contest the nomination compared to 49 per cent with a man as president.

In associations with a male dominated executive, 49 per cent had a woman contest the nomination compared to 57 per cent with gender balance on the executive.

Finally, the presence of a local search committee increases the likelihood of a woman contesting the nomination by 10 per cent.

The corrections, which have no effect on the conclusions drawn, result from a combination of coding error and additional information becoming available from Elections Canada.

The author regrets the error.

Reference

Cross, William. 2016. "The Importance of local party activity in understanding Canadian politics: Winning from the ground up in the 2015 federal election." Canadian Journal of Political Science / Revue canadienne de science politique 49 (4): 601–620. <https://doi.org/10.1017/S0008423916000962>

Cite this article: Cross W (2019). The Importance of local party activity in understanding Canadian politics: Winning from the ground up in the 2015 federal election – CORRIGENDUM. Canadian Journal of Political Science 52, 629. <https://doi.org/10.1017/S0008423919000684>

© Canadian Political Science Association (l'Association canadienne de science politique) and/et la Société québécoise de science politique 2019