CONTRIBUTORS

VIRGINIA LEE BARNES-DEAN has done extensive fieldwork in Uganda, Somalia and the Sudan. At present she is Visiting Professor of Anthropology at Emory University, Georgia.

ELIZABETH CASHDAN is Assistant Professor of Anthropology at the University of Pittsburgh. She is an ecological anthropologist and has conducted fieldwork in Botswana (1975–77) among several Basarwa populations.

RICHARD HOGG is at present working with Oxfam in northern Kenya on a project designed to assist destitute pastoralists to re-establish themselves in the pastoral economy. He received his MA and PhD from the University of Manchester, where he was Research Associate until taking up his present appointment.

THOMAS N. HUFFMAN is Professor and Head, Department of Archaeology, University of the Witwatersrand. He has written many papers on anthropological archaeology and the Iron Age prehistory of southern Africa.

WYATT MACGAFFEY is Professor of Anthropology at Haverford College, Pennsylvania. His new book, Religion and Society in Central Africa, is based partly on the indigenous Kongo ethnography whose historical context he describes in this issue.
