

The Historical Journal

Founded in 1958, the Historical Journal publishes on all aspects of history since 1500, providing a forum for younger scholars making a distinguished debut as well as publishing the work of historians with an international reputation. The journal publishes original research in full-length articles and shorter communications and major surveys of the field in historiographical reviews and review articles. Contributions are aimed both at specialists and non-specialists.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR CONTRIBUTORS

1. Submissions must:
  - a. be the original work of the author;
  - b. not be under consideration for publication elsewhere;
  - c. not have been published before, even in part, in print or electronically.
2. Submissions should be made online at <http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/hj>

You will need to create an account if you do not have one. (If you are unsure if you have an account, or have forgotten your password, use the password help function.) Please contact the part-time office at hj@hist.cam.ac.uk if you have any questions about the procedure, or wish to make a submission by another means.

3. Aside from the main text, you will need to provide with your submission:
  - a. an abstract of not more than 200 words;
  - b. a single title which clarifies the subject matter of your paper, and which is no more than 20 words long. Colons and sub-titles are only allowed at the discretion of the co-editors;
  - c. a word count, including notes.
4. Texts must be completely anonymous to allow double-blind refereeing; referees consider PDF versions of texts. Acknowledgements and the like can be added later to submissions which are accepted for publication.
5. Initial submissions should be presented to a high scholarly standard. You must double space the text, paginate, and use arabic (not roman) numerals to indicate footnotes, which should be single spaced at the bottom of the page. Divide submissions into sections, marked by roman numerals not sub-titles. Introductory sections can be left unnumbered. On acceptance, authors will be asked to bring their piece into line with the journal's conventions, details of which can be found in the Historical Journal instructions for authors of accepted papers document.
6. Please try to keep the length of articles to 10,000 words, communications to 5,000 words, historiographical reviews to 8,000 words, and review articles to a maximum of 5,000 words with 700-1,000 words given to each book reviewed - all inclusive of footnotes. We sometimes publish significantly longer contributions, but authors must raise this possibility with the editors at the earliest stage, ideally before submission, via hj@hist.cam.ac.uk.

7. We will consider submissions in languages other than English. In the first instance, send a 300 word summary in English of your proposal to hj@hist.cam.ac.uk. When a non-English submission is accepted, a small fund exists to support the author in providing a high-quality English translation. Authors submitting in English for whom English is not their first language may wish to have their manuscript read by a native speaker before submission.
8. Competing interests declaration: Authors should include a competing interests declaration at the end of their manuscripts. However, if a declaration contains identifiable information, authors should email their declaration to the relevant editor instead of including it within their manuscript – to preserve the anonymity of their manuscript. This declaration will be subject to editorial review and may be published in the article. Competing interests are situations that could be perceived to exert an undue influence on the content or publication of an author's work. They may include, but are not limited to, financial, professional, contractual or personal relationships or situations. If the manuscript has multiple authors, the author submitting must include competing interest declarations relevant to all contributing authors. Example wording for a declaration is as follows: "Competing interests: Author A is employed at company B. Author C owns shares in company D, is on the Board of company E and is a member of organisation F. Author G has received grants from company H." If no competing interests exist, the declaration should state "Competing interests: The author(s) declare none".
9. We encourage the use of illustrations, graphs, and tables where they present essential material or aid understanding. Authors are responsible for obtaining necessary permissions for illustrations. At submission stage, simple scanned images of illustrations are acceptable, but high quality images are required for accepted submissions – for further details please see the Journals artwork guide. Figures may, if appropriate, appear in colour in the digital version of the published article but will be printed in black and white. We also encourage submissions of supplementary material, please see here for more details.
10. While much of the content we publish rests on original research and specialist knowledge, contributions should be accessible and stimulating to the non-specialist. It is vital that you provide sufficient historiographical context and make clear the wider significance of your submission.

OPEN ACCESS POLICY

The Historical Journal has established an open access policy that allows all authors to achieve full compliance with all existing open access (OA) requirements including those of RCUK and HEFCE in the UK, the Wellcome Trust, the EU's Horizon 2020 funding programme and the Australian Research Council. To this end, authors whose articles are accepted for publication are able to post their accepted manuscript on their personal/departmental websites and their institution's digital repository as soon as they receive a positive decision from the Editors. For these purposes the 'accepted manuscript' is defined as the fully peer-reviewed version of a paper at the point at which it has been accepted for publication by the Editors but before it is sent to the publisher for copyediting and typesetting. Immediate posting of this version is also permitted in non-commercial subject repositories. A link to the final publisher-produced, paginated 'version of record', on the publisher's platform must be included once the article has been through the publication process. This 'version of record' (the published PDF) should not be deposited or made available beyond the publisher's platform without separate permission from the publisher.

The HEFCE policy, which was announced in March 2014, relates to articles accepted for publication after April 2016. To be eligible for inclusion in the next REF assessment, papers must be deposited in the author's institutional repository no more than three months after they have been accepted for publication. It is the author's responsibility to ensure that this action is undertaken.

If the author or author's funding body requires an article to be freely available online to non-subscribers immediately upon publication or published under a Creative Commons licence (gold open access), they may request this subject to payment of an article processing charge (APC). In these circumstances, the manuscript submission and peer review procedures are unchanged. On acceptance of the article, the author will be asked to let Cambridge University Press know directly if they are choosing this option. More information about the APC price and licensing choices can be found on the Cambridge website (<https://www.cambridge.org/core/services/open-access-policies>).
