NEW BOOKS FROM MACMILLAN OF CANADA

To be published in November

A STUDENT'S MANUAL OF FRENCH PRONUNCIATION

by

Robert J. Gregg, Director of the Language
Laboratory at the University of British Columbia.

168 pages

about $2.25

This new manual is particularly addressed to English-speaking Canadians in school, at college, or working privately, who wish to improve their French pronunciation, to understand spoken French, or simply to read French aloud with an acceptable accent.

Although concisely written, this small book has been able to combine general theory with a detailed study of phonetics. Extensive phonetic transcriptions of reading material make the manual invaluable for work in language laboratories.

REFLEX FRENCH

by

E. J. H. Greene, Department of Modern Languages,
University of Alberta

Manoel Faucher, Department of Modern Languages, University of Alberta

Dennis M. Healy, Dean of Arts, Long Island
University

294 pages

$3.75

This new textbook concentrates on French as a live, spoken language and is well suited for use in universities that are developing language laboratories. It could also be valuable for the teaching of idiomatic English to French-speaking students.
