Sound analysis and lively debate from leading experts in the field of international affairs

THE OXFORD INTERNATIONAL REVIEW

The Oxford International Review provides a forum for academics, government officials, and other experts to share their opinions on important world events. The magazine encourages a more historical and analytical approach to the discussion of international relations than popular news periodicals generally provide, while remaining more accessible than a specialized academic journal.

Each edition consists of three sections: a symposium, a world events section, and a book reviews section. Recent symposiums have covered such issues as German unification, the New World Order, and the Middle East peace process. The latest issue focuses on Latin America.
