Victims of the Miracle

Development and the Indians of Brazil

SHELTON H. DAVIS

This is the first full-scale account by an anthropologist of the social and environmental impact of the Amazon development programme, the controversial effort by the Brazilian Government to open up and develop the Amazon region. Primarily concerned with the condition of the Indian tribes, this book also discusses the significance of the 'economic miracle' and the threat to the ecology of the Amazon Basin.

The Politics of Latin American Development

GARY W. WYNIA

Professor Wynia here combines a concise survey of Latin American political processes, with a detailed analysis of the types of political systems that have dominated life in the region in recent years. The result is a balanced assessment of the political institutions and development strategies currently found there, and of the effects of these on the welfare of Latin Americans.

Drought and Irrigation in North-East Brazil

ANTHONY L. HALL

This book analyses the effectiveness of current Brazilian irrigation strategy in solving the problems of rural poverty, unemployment, and rural-urban migration associated with the drought to which the semi-arid interior of North-east Brazil is periodically subject. The evidence collected here suggests that, rather than solving these problems, present irrigation tactics tend to exacerbate them.

The Merchants of Buenos Aires 1778-1810

Family and Commerce

SUSAN MIGDEN SOCOLOW

When Buenos Aires became one of the major commercial centres of the Spanish American empire, the primary beneficiaries of the new prosperity were the wholesale merchants, a group which came to control the commerce of the entire colony. This study looks at the formation of the merchant group, and at the social patterns which assured its primacy in economic and social life.

The Panama Canal

The Crisis in Historical Perspective

Walter La Feber

'Dispassionate and scholarly study. . . La Feber writes with lucid terseness and presents his information cogently and powerfully. . . All in all he has produced a book which will surely be essential reading for any politician or administrator, technician or frequent user, concerned with one of the most controversial waterways in the world.' Lloyd's List. £4.95

The Caribbean

The Genesis of a Fragmented Nationalism

Franklin W. Knight

'The regional line of inquiry has been fruitfully pursued in this book . . . in the absence of other good works of general synthesis this will remain the most useful introduction to the region.' The Times Higher Education Supplement. £6.75 paper covers £3.25

The Brazilian
Kafka presents
a phantasmagoria
of life.

These beautiful, strange, and hallucinatory stories by Murilo Rubião deal with magic and the magical—animals, dragons, human beings alive and dead appear or disappear, converse, feel, exist in an almost casual yet fantastic realism, that continues to haunt the reader long after the stories are over. As Publishers Weekly comments:

"The world of the Brazilian writer Murilo Rubião is a strange, almost Kafkaesque one.... Rubião's stories are unquestionably strange and haunting."

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Journal of Latin American Studies is published twice a year under the academic sponsorship of the Centres or Institutes of Latin American Studies at the Universities of Cambridge, Glasgow, Liverpool, London and Oxford.

The scope of the journal is the study of Latin America from the standpoint of the social sciences, including anthropology, archaeology, economics, geography, history, international relations, politics, sociology, etc., though it is not concerned with linguistic or literary studies.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, but welcomes free discussion of such issues in the Latin American context, on the understanding that all responsibility for opinions expressed rests exclusively with the author concerned and not with either the journal or its editors.

Contributions are invited from all parts of the world: Articles should generally not be more than 8,000 words long, and two copies, typed with double-spacing, should be submitted. Diagrams and maps may be included by arrangement with the editors. The journal is published in English, but articles written in other languages may be considered, and arrangements made as required for translation into English. Contributors should keep one copy of the typescript for use in correcting proofs.

All contributions and editorial correspondence should be addressed to Journal of Latin American Studies, Institute of Latin American Studies, 31 Tavistock Square, London, WC1H 9HA.

Each contributor will receive, free of charge, 25 offprints of their article and a copy of the issue of the journal in which it appears.
