Gregory Baum, editor

THE FUTURE OF BELIEF DEBATE

"No man since Teilhard's The Phenomenon of Man has so seriously threatened the conventions of Roman Catholic thought," said the National Catholic Reporter upon the publication of Leslie Dewart's The Future of Belief. Now the widespread controversy, acclamation, and criticism inspired by the volume is available in book form.

"The total effect of The Future of Belief Debate is a conversation involving the Christian intellectual community . . . it will eventually involve the entire Christian Church. . . ." — Gregory Baum Cloth $4.95

Carl Amery

CAPITULATION

The Lesson of German Catholicism

This indictment of German Catholicism places the blame for the Church's capitulation in the face of Hitler precisely upon the "faithful" — the vast body of "milieu Catholics" who did not expect to be required to be Christian in addition to upright members of society, and who would have refused, says Amery, to be Christian if the hierarchy had been Christian enough to ask them. Today German Catholicism looks good on paper, but essentially, Amery contends, it has not changed. His is not a gentle study. It has a detailed examination of an unredeemed failure and its legacy. $4.95

THE RESPECTABLE MURDERERS

Social Evil and Christian Conscience

The Respectable Murderers examines with studied dispassion the perverse immoralities committed or condoned by ordinary "decent" Christians: American Negro Slavery, the extermination of millions of Jews, the murderous bombing of civilians, the exploitation of the poor — such are the unnoticed and unregretted crimes that professedly religious people tolerated and even applauded. The book concludes with a comparison of the ethic of respectability and the ethic of Christian love, and calls for the Christian intellectual to fulfill a prophetic role in the eradication of social evil. $4.50

William Osborne

SEGREGATED COVENANT

Race Relations and American Catholics

Sociologist William Osborne has written the first historical and sociological analysis of the relation of the Church to American Negroes. Following a survey of conditions from the days of slavery, he examines in depth the past and present situation in key dioceses, including New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Washington, D.C., New Orleans, Lafayette, Los Angeles, and Detroit, providing statistics on churches, schools, hospitals, organizations, movements, and individuals that have not been previously compiled. Extremely readable, never polemical, Segregated Covenant is an indictment built simply from the facts. $5.95

Louis Roberts

THE ACHIEVEMENT OF KARL RAHNER

Foreword by Karl Rahner

The first complete and systematic synthesis of the monumental achievement of one of the world's outstanding theologians. Dr. Roberts, who studied for many years with Karl Rahner, presents in detail the scope and depth of Rahner's vision, including the philosophical foundation of his theology, his use of the "transcendental method," his theory of the development of dogma, and his contribution to the phenomenology of religion. $6.50

Robert L. Richard, S. J.

SECULARIZATION THEORY

Foreword by Martin E. Marty. A distinguished new voice in American theology, Father Robert L. Richard gives a creative assessment of "death of God" theology, revealing in the current movement much more than a restatement of atheism, a species of demythologization, or a philosophical and scientific rationalism. He sees religious secularism as a new category, springing chiefly from the thought and experiences of Dietrich Bonhoeffer and given its principal contemporary mode by Harvey Cox.

"A stimulating, sober, judicious, fast-paced book. . . . The ecumenical future will be enriched by his reflectiveness." — Michael Novak $4.95
