Three important aids for research on . . .

(1) how the American public tries to solve its legal problems, (2) how it utilizes the services of lawyers and in what areas, and (3) how satisfied (or dissatisfied) it is with the delivery of legal services.

The Legal Needs of the Public: The Final Report of a National Survey

by Barbara A. Curran

This first comprehensive survey of legal needs addresses the questions: To what extent do people have problems for which legal services may be useful? What is the extent of use and nonuse of lawyers? What is the nature of the use? What kinds of lawyers are sought? How are they chosen? What is the public's reaction to legal costs? What are the attitudes of the public toward lawyers and toward the legal system generally? These and many other questions are examined not only for the public at large but also for various demographic subgroups based on age, race, sex, education, income, occupation, and combinations of these factors. The results reported are based on statistical analyses of data obtained in one-to-two-hour personal interviews with each of 2,064 Americans scientifically sampled to represent the experiences and opinions of the adult population.

Data Manual for the Survey of the Legal Needs of the Public

by Barbara A. Curran and Katherine J. Rosich

The Data Manual provides complete information about the nature of the answers of the 2,064 respondents to the survey of the legal needs of the public. Each answer to the survey was coded and transferred from the questionnaires to magnetic computer tape. The Data Manual will be of particular interest to individuals and groups who are interested in conducting further analysis of these data.

A special limited edition of

Sources of Our Liberties

Edited by Richard L. Perry

Consider this handsomely bound collection of historic documents for

- an addition to your personal or your firm's library
- an award for service to the bar or a firm
- a gift to commemorate an anniversary or retirement
- a tangible way to recognize professional or academic achievement

Each copy of Sources of Our Liberties may be personalized or commemorated by embossing in gold the name of an individual, a firm, or an event on the front cover at no additional cost.

The American Bar Foundation proudly presents this masterfully printed and handsomely bound collection of historic documents that constitute the major sources of our individual liberties. Among the documents included are: The Magna Carta, the Mayflower Compact and other charters drawn under British rule in America, Petition of Right, the Abolition of the Star Chamber, the Northwest Ordinance, and the Constitution and its amendments.

Each document is preceded by an editorial note on its political background, its effectiveness in its own time in meeting the problems it sought to solve, and its ultimate influence in the establishment of our liberties. These introductions, with marginal notes and bibliographies, tie together the documents as part of a long political process. This edition contains a bibliographical note by Stanley N. Katz, Professor of History, Princeton University, detailing publications since the 1959 edition.
