Mixed Emotions

Beyond Fear and Hatred in International Conflict

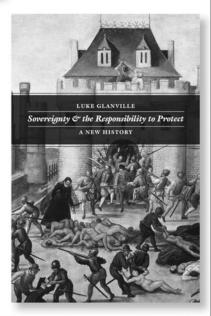

Andrew A.G. Ross

"This is a big, bold book on an important subject. Ross advances novel arguments about emotion as a social process and illustrates his argument through three fascinating case studies. The big picture he draws is compelling and raises large, important questions about how we currently understand global politics. Potentially pathbreaking, the book opens a new field of inquiry which scholars in the field are just beginning to explore in a systematic way."—Janice Gross Stein, University of Toronto

Sovereignty and the Responsibility to Protect

A New History Luke Glanville

"Glanville's engaging account demonstrates that responsibilities have almost always been at the heart of both the justification for sovereign authority and broader understandings of its meaning and content. This book is essential reading for all those interested in sovereignty's status and trajectory in international society and in contemporary efforts to implement the principle of the 'responsibility to protect."—Jennifer Welsh, University of Oxford Paper $32.50
