Carnegie Corporation's Grant for Social Research in South Africa

THE Carnegie Corporation of New York has made available about £7,500 to the National Council for Social Research, under the Department of Education, Arts, and Science, for fellowships for the training of advanced social research workers at the University of Natal, according to an official statement. The Corporation has also offered to provide the necessary funds during 1954 for the appointment of two American scientists at the university to assist with the project. This is not the first time the Carnegie Corporation has taken an interest in social research in South Africa. In 1927 the Corporation provided funds for investigations into the conditions of 'poor whites'. Funds have also previously been given for the activities of the South African Council for Educational and Social Research.

The statement issued by the Department of Education says that South Africa has a number of urgent social problems to investigate and solve, but it is handicapped by a dearth of highly trained staff to plan, direct, and conduct such investigations according to the latest scientific techniques. These techniques usually involve team work between workers in sociology, economics, psychology, education, social anthropology, and allied subjects. The contemplated project for the training of advanced social research workers will include problems in all these fields.

The administration of funds and general direction of the project, which has been initiated by Dr. E. G. Malherbe, principal of the University of Natal, will be undertaken by the ad hoc committee, consisting of members of the staff of the University and representatives of the National Council for Social Research.

University College for Central Africa

THE immediate foundation of a University College as a first step towards a full university in Central Africa is recommended by the Report of the Commission on Higher Education for Africans in Central Africa, published by the Central African Council, Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia.

The report was prepared by a Commission set up by the Central African Council. The members of the Commission were Sir Alexander Carr-Saunders, Director, London School of Economics (Chairman), Mr. A. V. Hill, Emeritus Professor of Physiology, London University, Dr. Alexander Kerr (formerly Principal, South African Native College, Fort Hare, now the University College of Fort Hare), Dr. F. G. Young, Professor of Biochemistry, Cambridge, and Mr. Walter Adams, Secretary, Inter-University Council for Higher Education in the Colonies.

The Report recommends that the University College should be created by Royal Charter, and that in preparing its constitution the constitutions of the new universities in Britain should be followed. Application should be made by the College to be received into 'special relations' with the University of London. The Commission points out that it is contrary to university tradition to have regard to race, religion or class when selecting candidates for admission. It is not in itself contrary to university practice to reserve certain hostels
