EIGHTEENTH ANNUAL NORTH AMERICAN LABOR HISTORY CONFERENCE

The Program Committee of the North American Labor History Conference invites proposals for panels and single papers on the theme, "Memory and the Re-Telling of Working Class Lives," for the 1996 meeting to be held 17–19 October 1996, at Wayne State University in Detroit. The Committee is interested in sessions or papers that explore public and private memory in working class and labor history, including such issues as how workers remember, retell, celebrate, and sometimes repress memories of their personal and political, individual, and collective lives; public history of the working class and labor movement past; workers' autobiographies and biographies; the study, analysis, and representation of working class and labor history (both theoretical and historiographical); narratives of class identity, consciousness, and lives, especially as they intersect with race, ethnicity, gender, and nation; and the teaching of working class and labor history. Those engaged in teaching and curriculum projects, public history and outreach, labor education, oral history projects, and cultural projects on working class and labor history in theater, music, film, video, art, museum exhibits, and dance are encouraged to submit proposals. The Committee continues to be interested in the submission of proposals that incorporate Latin American, European, African, and Asian comparisons and interdisciplinary approaches.
