By G. A. REISNER. 13¼ × 11¼, pp. 456, 2 plates, 190 text-figures, 2 folding maps. 84s. net.

This book (meant for the use of practical archaeologists) is the first of a series, of which the second and third will deal with the Giza Necropolis and the Giza Mastabas, and forms a detailed introduction to the second volume. After discussing the prototypes of Egyptian tombs, the author describes in the greatest detail the tomb types of Dynasty I (First and Second Parts), the subsidiary graves at Abydos; the tomb types of Dynasties II and III; the small graves of Dynasties II-III; the Royal pyramidal tombs of early Dynasty IV; the mastaba and the substructure of private tombs of the reign of Sneferuw; the development of the superstructures of private tombs, Dynasties I-III, and Sneferuw; and the reconstruction of the royal superstructures of Dynasties I-II. He then reviews the development of the Egyptian tomb in this period. There are three appendixes, including unpublished graves from four sites, and the topographies of two cemeteries.

A Short History by AUBREY ATTWATER

Edited, with an Introduction and a Postscript, by S. C. ROBERTS

19 plates. 5s. net

The author of this short history had already spent several years preparing material for what would have been a far more comprehensive book, a definitive history of the College. It was only at the repeated requests of friends that he began the writing of this smaller volume. At his death in July 1935 the book was in typescript as far as the end of the eighteenth century, and the first portion of the final chapter had been drafted. Mr. S. C. Roberts, his literary executor, has prepared the book for publication and has added an introduction and a postscript.
