
Family Law and Litigation in Basotho Society

Sebastian Poulter

This study provides the first detailed and systematic account of the customary family law of the Basotho. Although essentially a legal work, it includes an introductory survey of the cultural, economic, social, and institutional framework within which the law operates. Hitherto in the absence of proper law reports little has been known about how the courts, at every level, have been applying the customary law. £12

The Traditional History of the Jie of Uganda

J. E. Lamphear

This book is the first attempt to reconstruct the pre-colonial history of the Jie of Uganda, and the first detailed historical study of any of the central Paraniotic-speaking peoples of Karamoja District, Uganda, neighbouring areas of north-western Kenya, and the southern Sudan. £9.75 Oxford Studies in African Affairs

Kings and Kingsmen

Early Mbundu States in Angola

Joseph C. Miller

How small scale and decentralized African political institutions developed into large kingdoms so prominent in early African history has puzzled anthropologists and historians alike. This book approaches the question from a historical perspective. The study shows that it was purely local conditions that moved kinsmen towards political centralization rather than external stimuli. £9.50 Oxford Studies in African Affairs

Chiefs and Clerics

Abdul Bokar Kan and the History of Futa Toro, 1853-1891

David Robinson

Set in Futa Toro, or the middle valley of the Senegal River, Chiefs and Clerics begins with the struggle for hegemony between the French under Faidherbe and the Tokolor reformer, al-hajj Umer Tal, and continues with the political career of Abdul Bokar Kan. Using oral as well as Arabic and French archival sources, the author explains the continuing influence of the Umarian movement, Futa's links with Senegalese trade and politics, and Abdul Bokar's careful blend of resistance to and cooperation with the French. The Development of an AFRICAN WORKING CLASS

STUDIES IN CLASS FORMATION AND ACTION

Edited by Richard Sandbrook and Robin Cohen

This collection of papers, covering a wide geographical range, subjects the historical, political and social role of African workers to a fundamental reassessment and examines the extent to which a working class has formed and undertaken collective action in various parts of Africa.

It will be of great interest to historians, political scientists, sociologists and to all those interested in the study of industrial relations and trade union organisations. University students studying African politics and sociology will find the book invaluable.

Culture, Tradition and Society in the West African Novel

EMMANUEL OBIECHINA

'The study is informative without being propaganda, and it is analytical without being too intellectual. For students of African literature, history and even sociology, the text is a valuable reference work which will serve as a rich source of information which before had either been crudely presented or unknown.'

The Return of the Gods

The Sacred Art of Susanne Wenger

ULLI BEIER

In this book the Yoruba religion, its beliefs and ritual practices, are seen through the eyes of a remarkable woman. Susanne Wenger has been completely absorbed into the Yoruba religion and has recreated the shrines in the famous Oshun grove, developing a style of sculpture that is a powerful mixture of old and new.

Education, Participation, and Power: Essays in Theory and Practice

Fundamental to these essays is what Paulo Freire calls an 'option for man'—a stance which calls for teachers and students alike to become conscious agents in a dynamic, mutual process of action and reflection. These articles represent practical experiences which demonstrate that men and women can choose a hopeful future.

Coups and Army Rule in Africa

Studies in Military Style

Samuel Decalo

Samuel Decalo presents detailed evidence from Dahomey, Togo, Congo-Brazzaville, and Uganda that African military coups are engineered by coteries of cliques composed of ambitious officers seeking self-advancement. He successfully refutes prevailing theories that military rule has fostered socioeconomic or political development or stability. c. $17.50 p. $4.95

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the businessman, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
