BRITISH INSTITUTE AT ANKARA

The objectives of the British Institute at Ankara are to enable UK scholars across the humanities and social sciences to undertake world-class original research and fieldwork focused on Turkey and the Black Sea littoral region; to encourage and facilitate collaborative research with other UK institutions and with scholars and institutions in Turkey and the Black Sea littoral region; and to maintain a centre of research excellence in Ankara focused on the archaeology, history and related subjects of Turkey.

A small staff at the Institute's premises in Ankara conduct their own research, assist scholars and maintain the centre of research excellence. The centre houses a library of over 52,000 volumes, research collections of botanical, faunal, epigraphic and pottery material, together with collections of maps, photographs and fieldwork archives, and a laboratory and computer services. Access to these resources is available free of charge to members of the Institute.

The Institute is able to offer to members, for a reasonable charge, the use of accommodation, surveying and photographic equipment, and a four-wheel-drive vehicle.

The Institute encourages as wide a scope of high-quality research as can be supported with its financial, practical and administrative resources. The Institute supports a small number of thematically focused research programmes, stimulated by current concerns of academic research in the UK as well as internationally; these are known as Strategic Research Initiatives. In 2010 the following initiatives were supported: Climate History of Anatolia and the Black Sea; Frontiers of the Ottoman World; and Settlement History of Anatolia. A diverse group of research projects, which were funded and/or facilitated by the Institute, operated within the Strategic Research Initiatives scheme during 2010; these include a study of climatic and cultural change in Cappadocia over a period of 5,000 years directed by Neil Roberts of the University of Plymouth, the historical-archaeological investigation of Akkerman fortress, Ukraine, directed by Caroline Finkel, Svitlana Bilyayeva and Victor Ostapchuk, and the major multi-disciplinary research project at Çatalhöyük directed by Ian Hodder via University College London. In addition, the Institute is conducting a major British Academy-funded international research project in collaboration with the Association for South East Asian Studies UK investigating links between the Ottoman Empire, Turkey and Southeast Asia between the 16th and 20th centuries. The Institute also offers a range of grants to support undergraduate to post-doctoral research.

Subscription to the Institute costs £35 per annum (£17.50 for students and those who are unwaged). Members are entitled to copies of the Institute's annual journal, Anatolian Studies, and of its annual publication on current research, Anatolian Archaeology, a discount on other Institute publications, notification of conferences and lectures, and access to the centre of research excellence, accommodation and other services in Ankara.
