

ganization in Human Services: Implications for the Future."

Serving on the Humphrey Award Committee were Robert K. Whelan, Chair, University of North Florida; Lewis Bowman, University of South Florida; Mark Burns, Auburn University; Ronald E. Goertz, Alabama Department of Public Health; Gerald T. O'Neil, Metropolitan Dade County Office of Health Services; Barbara P. Pomeroy, International Year of the Child; A. Robert Thoeny, Tennessee Commission on Higher Education; Thomas C. Webster, C. W. Post Center, Long Island University; and Samuel J. Yeager, Wichita State University.

In Memoriam

John C. Livingston

Dr. John C. "Jack" Livingston, professor of government at California State University, Sacramento, and a vigorous advocate of civil rights and academic freedom, died July 22, after a long battle with cancer. He was 62.

Dr. Livingston, who had been on sick leave the past year, joined the CSUS faculty in 1954 and was acting dean of the school of arts and sciences in 1971 and 1972. A founder of the statewide Academic Senate, he headed the CSUS Academic Senate in 1970, and was head of the Academic Senate of the 19-campus state college system in 1965.

Dr. Livingston was honored in 1966 with the California State Colleges Distinguished Teachers Award.

In 1969 he was acting chairman of the CSUS-based Committee for Support of Higher Education, formed to combat the poor image education in California had acquired in campus crises at the time and to stop punitive legislative then before the Legislature.

Before moving to the CSUS campus, Dr. Livingston taught at the University of Denver and the University of Colorado. While in the Denver area, he helped organize opposition to the extreme abuses of McCarthyism and worked in defense of academic freedom and civil rights.

In Sacramento, he served on the board of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People from 1962 until 1966; on the Chancellor's Commission on Human Rights from 1966 until 1968, and on the advisory panel of the Teachers' Bill of Rights from 1965 until 1967. A strong advocate of arms control, he was the author of published articles on unilateral disarmament. He also was an outspoken critic of American involvement in the Vietnam War.

An Army infantryman during World War II, he earned a battlefield commission while fighting in the European theater.

Dr. Livingston was a native of Ogden, Utah, and received his bachelor's degree from the University of California at Los Angeles, his master's degree from the University of California at Berkeley and his doctorate from Claremont Graduate School.

He is survived by his wife, Ethel; sons, Cleve of Sacramento, Michael, head rowing coach at the University of California at Berkeley, and George, a student at Berkeley; daughter, Rebecca Harris of Sacramento; and six grandchildren.

Paul R. Murray
California State University,
Sacramento

Frederick L. Schuman: The Chicago Years

Frederick L. Schuman was connected with the University of Chicago for 17 years, four years as an undergraduate student, three years as a graduate student and ten years as a member of the Department of Political Science then under the leadership of Charles E. Merriam. He received his Ph.B. degree in 1924 and his Ph.D. degree in 1927. As a student, a teacher, a lecturer, and a writer, he achieved an outstanding record. He soon acquired a reputation as a vigorous defender of civil liberties, political democracy, minority rights, and human dignity in the face of Communist