Encounter

EDITED BY STEPHEN SPENDER AND MELVIN J. LASKY

'Anyone who wants to follow the mysterious movements of ideas in the modern world is forced to read ENCOUNTER,' writes Joseph Alsop, the well-known Washington columnist. This flair for what is truly relevant has made ENCOUNTER the most widely read monthly magazine of its type in the world. In the last few years its circulation has more than doubled; while there are today almost four times as many subscribers as in 1955.

Recent issues have contained articles on such widely diverse topics as the Future of the Left, the Psychopath, Film Censorship, Palestine Today, Zen, American Youth, Pasternak, the Uses of Television, Nigerian Independence, Prostitution, De Gaulle. Recently, too, ENCOUNTER 'scooped' two long stories by Soviet writers and published the whole of C. P. Snow's universally discussed lecture on 'The Two Cultures.' Contributors to forthcoming issues include Kingsley Amis, Raymond Aron, C. A. R. Crosland, Karl Jaspers, George F. Kennan, Arthur Koestler, Herbert Luthy, Ignazio Silone, Lionel Trilling and John Wain.

ENCOUNTER has an uncanny way of catching up with you if you do not catch up with it. It also has a habit of selling out soon after publication (four issues did this in 1960). A subscription guarantees your copy and costs only 45s. (U.S. $7.50) for a year, including postage. Subscriptions can be entered with ENCOUNTER, 25 Haymarket, London, S.W.1, or with any newsagent.
