MR. J. A. K. THOMSON in The Classical Review.—"The author, with rare lapses, writes clearly and vigorously and with an enthusiasm for his subject which must always be an engaging quality when the subject is Athens. He is, to the best of my observation, very accurate. He has, on the whole, well succeeded in combining the quarrelsome virtues of lucidity and conciseness. . . . The book is pleasant to handle and easy to read; the illustrations, especially of Athens, are excellent."

MACMILLAN'S NEW AND RECENT BOOKS

By the late SIR SAMUEL DILL

Roman Society in Gaul in the Merovingian Age. By the late
SIR SAMUEL DILL, M.A. 8vo. [Shortly.]

This book, which Sir Samuel Dill had completed at the time of his death, is of the same character as his two earlier volumes on Roman Society in the Last Century of the Western Empire and on Roman Society from Nero to Marcus Aurelius, which have become recognised authorities on the periods with which they deal. Sir Samuel Dill was not only a scholar of the first rank, but he had the art of treating his subject in a way which appeals to the general reader as well as to the student.

The Times Literary Supplement.—"This admirable little book is one which has long been wanted; perhaps it is only by reading it that one realises how much wanted it was. . . . Unqualified praise is due to the skill and judgment with which Mr. Gaselee has dealt with his material."

The Ring of Nestor. A Glimpse into the Minoan After-World, and a Sepulchral Treasure of Gold Signet-Rings and Bead-Seals from Thisbè, Boeotia. By SIR ARTHUR EVANS, M.A., D.Litt., F.R.S. With 5 Plates, 1 Coloured and 4 Collotype, and 54 Figures in the Text. Imp. 8vo. 12s. 6d. net.

Architecture. By SIR THOMAS GRAHAM JACKSON, Bart., R.A., Hon. D.C.L., etc.
With many Plates and other Illustrations. 8vo. 25s. net.

* * * A complete history of European Architecture from the Earliest Times to the Present Day.

The Times Literary Supplement.—"In this book Sir Thomas Jackson is at his best in describing the unfolding of continuity, the modulations of the music, through changes in constructive methods. . . . From the point of view of information, the individual buildings described and illustrated, the book is only one of many; what makes it personal is the consistency with which throughout the whole history of the art, from antiquity to the present day, the poetry of construction is held as the meaning of architecture."

The Daily Telegraph.—"It must be a matter of profound regret to all students, whether lay or professional, that Sir Thomas Jackson did not live to witness the success which is sure to attend upon this excellent volume. . . . He takes a magnificent sweep in his survey of architecture, from the day of the early Greek to the eve of the day of concrete. . . . The volume contains an exceptionally fine series of illustrations from photographs."
