

Fundamentals of Biometry

L. N. BALAAM

Director of Biometric Services, University of Sydney

A fundamental course in biometry, an essential part of the training of all biological scientists, cannot be presented without the necessary mathematical tools. In the unhurried development of this work these are introduced gradually within the text, the only prerequisite being some arithmetic and simple algebra. With this grounding the research worker will have the confidence and skill to make a proper use of biometrical methods.
