CONFLICTING PATHS

Growing Up in America

HARVEY J. GRAFF

We grow up—so simple, it just seems to happen—and yet there are endless variations in the way we do it. What part does culture play in the process? How much do politics and economics have to do with it? As the nation has matured, have the ways people grow up changed too? This book traces the many paths to adulthood that Americans have pursued over time.

Harvey J. Graff, a distinguished social historian, mines more than five hundred personal narratives for what they can tell us about the passage from childhood to maturity. Drawing on diaries, memoirs, autobiographies, and letters, he builds a penetrating, firsthand account of how childhood, adolescence, and youth have been experienced and understood—as functions of familial and social relations, as products of biology and physiology, and as cultural and political constructs. These first-person testimonies cross the lines of time and space, gender and class, ethnicity, age, and race. In these individual stories and the larger story they constitute, Graff exposes the way social change—including institutional developments and shifting attitudes, expectations, and policy—and personal experience intertwine in the process of growing up. Together, these narratives form a challenging, subtle guide to historical experiences and to the epochal remaking of growing up.

Education, Society, and Economic Opportunity

A Historical Perspective on Persistent Issues

Maris A. Vinovskis

"An important book by one of the premier scholars in the social history of education. Vinovskis presents a coherent liberal vision of education—evolutionary, functionalist, multi-causal, and meritocratic—that stands in strong contrast to the revisionist view. His book deserves a large audience."—David Labaree 10 illus. $28.50

Preschool Education in America

*The Culture of Young Children from the Colonial
Era to the Present*

Barbara Beatty

"The definitive history of American preschool education. What is most important about the book is its incisive and insightful approach to preschool education as public policy. The issues are deceptively complex and subtle, and the book addresses them in simple and clear terms."

THE LIFE AND DEATH OF A RURAL AMERICAN HIGH SCHOOL

Farewell Little Kanawha

Alan DeYoung

Oral histories, interviews, county histories, and newspaper accounts are the basis of this study of a rural West Virginia high school between 1920 and 1990.

"An intellectual contribution of the first order....Its strength derives in large measure from DeYoung's deftness in crossing disciplinary borders....far more compelling than most educational research."

EDUCATING ELEMENTARY SCHOOL TEACHERS

The Struggle for Coherent Visions 1909-1978

By Robert A. Levin

Two schools of education—a large, city university and small, rural state college—followed distinctly different paths over a 70-year history in their efforts to conceptualize what novice elementary teachers should know, value, and be able to do. This book presents a comparative case history between these schools, showing how the curriculum changed over time with respect to ongoing cases of controversy in teacher education.

Robert A. Levin is Assistant Professor, Foundations of Education Department, Youngstown State University, Youngstown, Ohio.

CALL FOR PAPERS

Special Issue

Education in Early America

Guest Editor: Maris Vinovskis, University of Michigan

In 1997 the History of Education Quarterly will publish a special issue on education in early America (colonial period to 1815). We will consider topics on all aspects of the history of education, including both formal and nonformal education. We are particularly interested in articles on the history of childhood and the family, women as educators and learners, the history of literacy, the history of schools and schooling, the transmission of culture between racial and ethnic groups, and the history of education from a trans-Atlantic perspective. Please submit manuscripts by September 1996 to the Editor, History of Education Quarterly, School of Education, Indiana University, Bloomington, IN 47405.

Please note: Manuscripts should be prepared according to The Chicago Manual of Style (14th edition), double-spaced, limited to 9,000 words (including notes), and submitted in duplicate. Notes should be double spaced and placed at the end of the article.
