

42. Iqbāl Yaghmā'ī, "Madrasah-i Dār al-Funūn," Yaghma (Tir, 1348/1969), p. 223.
43. Leonard Binder, Iran: Political Development in a Changing Society (Berkeley, 1962), p. 105.

* * *

IN MEMORIAM

GUSTAV EDMUND VON GRUNEBaum

Professor Gustave Edmund von Grunebaum died on 27 February 1972, after a short illness, at the age of 62. While his brilliant and original scholarship spanned the widest reaches of Islamic culture, he was always particularly responsive to the phenomena of human imagination and creativity. It was in this context that he performed an inestimable service as friend and promoter of Iranian studies.

As Director of the Near Eastern Center at UCLA he gave ample evidence of his genuine and sympathetic interest in Iranian culture by co-sponsoring with The Society for Iranian Studies, and generously playing host to the International Conference on "The State and Society in Islamic Iran" in June of 1969.

The members of the Society for Iranian Studies join all the lovers of excellence and virtu in mourning his irreparable loss.

Amin Banani