New Wine & Old Bottles International Politics and Ethical Discourse

Jean Bethke Elshtain

With Contributions by Fred Dallmayr, Martha Merritt and a foreword by Raimo Väyrynen

“A strikingly fresh approach to thinking about power among and within nations. Elshtain succeeds in deflating the claims of sovereignty while showing how the idea of a world-state is full of unwelcome implications. The theme of forgiveness in political life is treated with great sensitivity. This is a wonderful book.”

The Postmodern Marx

TERRELL CARVER

In the wake of Communism's collapse in Eastern Europe, one of today's foremost interpreters of Marx's texts and ideas offers postmodern readings of canonical texts to discover what Marx has to say to our postmodern condition. Terrell Carver takes advantage of the ideological release of Marxism from its association with Soviet Communism to explore how Marx's writings can be reread in the spirit in which they were written: as a critique of capitalist society.

Marginalized Groups and the Failings of Liberal Representation

Melissa S. Williams

The prevailing conception of fair representation—what Melissa Williams calls “liberal representation”—concludes that the social identity of legislative representatives does not bear on their quality as representatives. Challenging this notion, Williams maintains that fair representation is powerfully affected by the identity of legislators.
