The Renaissance Hamlet

Issues and Responses in 1600

Roland Mushat Frye

“This will not be the last book on Hamlet, but it may well be the most substantial thus far, and one of the most useful.”

—Harry Levin, Harvard University

In this richly illustrated book, a well-known scholar reconstructs Shakespeare's cultural milieu, showing what reactions he could expect from his audiences and why they found Hamlet so intensely stirring.

Professor Frye describes contemporary attitudes toward issues such as rebellion, conscience, regicide, incest, retribution, and mourning. His investigation reveals reasons for viewing Hamlet not as an irresolute young man but as a vigorous and determined figure in confrontation with the moral dilemmas of his age.

The Profession of Player in Shakespeare's Time, 1590-1642

Gerald Eades Bentley

“This book provides a major service, as does Bentley's earlier volume.... Clarity of presentation and good judgment in evaluating data prevail throughout.”

—David Bevington, University of Chicago

A companion to the author's earlier volume—The Profession of Dramatist in Shakespeare's Time, this book is a comprehensive study of the customary practices of English players of the period—how they lived and worked and were paid, organized, and cast for parts in the phenomenally popular Elizabethan theatres of England. $25.00

A STATEMENT OF EDITORIAL POLICY

PMLA welcomes essays of interest to those concerned with the study of language and literature. As the publication of a large and heterogeneous association, the journal is receptive to a variety of topics, whether general or specific, and to all scholarly methods and theoretical perspectives. The ideal PMLA essay exemplifies the best of its kind, whatever the kind; addresses a significant problem; draws out clearly the implications of its findings; and engages the attention of its audience through a concise, readable presentation. Articles of fewer than 2,500 words or more than 12,500 words are not considered for publication. Translations should accompany foreign language quotations. The MLA urges its contributors to be sensitive to the social implications of language and to seek wording free of discriminatory overtones.

Only members of the association may submit articles to PMLA. Each article submitted is sent to at least one consultant reader and one member of the Advisory Committee. Articles recommended by these readers are then sent to the members of the Editorial Board, who meet periodically with the editor to make final decisions. Until a final decision is reached, the author's name is not made known to consultant readers, to members of the Advisory Committee and the Editorial Board, or to the editor.

Authors should follow the documentation form outlined in the Report of the Advisory Committee on Documentation Style (May 1982 PMLA) and, for other points of style, the MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers, Theses, and Dissertations. They should address submissions to the Editor of PMLA, 62 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10011. An author's name should not appear on the manuscript; instead, a cover sheet, with the author's name, address, and the title of the article, should accompany the article. Authors should not refer to themselves in the first person in the submitted text or notes if such references would identify them; any necessary references to the author's previous work, for example, should be in the third person.
