
Chang Tso-lin in Northeast China, 1911–1928

China, Japan, and the Manchurian Idea

Gavan McCormack. Drawn against the background of Japanese imperialism in Republican China, this is an account of the career of the most powerful Chinese warlord of his time. It focuses on Chang's struggle with Japan for control over the military, social, and industrial development of Northeast China. His success in retaining power until his assassination in 1928 is attributed to three factors: Northeast China's immense wealth, its favorable position in strategic terms, and, surprisingly, the efficiency and sophistication of Chang's civil administration. $16.50

Educator of Modern China

WILLIAM J. DUIKER

In the broadest sense, this intellectual biography is designed to give insight into the reasons why Western values and institutions failed to take root in the Chinese environment. Three interrelated themes are treated by Professor Duiker: the evolution of the Chinese educational system from the beginning of the 20th century to World War II; the process by which a Chinese intellectual absorbed Western values and attitudes while retaining significant elements of his traditional Confucian world view; the goals of the humanist movement in early republican China and the reasons for its failure.

Modern Asian Studies is concerned with the history, geography, politics, sociology, literature, economics and social anthropology of South Asia, South-East Asia, China and Japan.

Contributions should be based on original research or field-work. They should be between 2000 and 8000 words long. Two typed copies should be submitted. Each author will receive twenty-five free offprints of his article and a copy of the Journal in which it appears.

Submission of an article will be taken to imply that it has not been previously published and that it is not on offer to any other publisher. In the interests of authors, copyright is normally assigned to Cambridge University Press. The editor welcomes expression of all shades of opinion, but responsibility for them rests with their authors.

All correspondence should be addressed to Dr Gordon Johnson, Selwyn College, Cambridge CB3 9DQ, England.
