*Announcing a New Impression of "the most important and most widely read and discussed book on the Doctrine of the Ministry in the Church written in our time."

The Apostolic Ministry

Essays on the History and Doctrine of the Episcopacy, edited by

The late K. E. KIRK, Bishop of Oxford

"Here Churchmen will find the plain but exhilarating truth about an institution which is fundamental to their Churchmanship. They will discover, likewise, what about it is essential, and what is incidental, accidental, or plainly disastrous. If non-episcopalians want to know something of what Catholic episcopacy really means, we beg them not to enquire of the episcopate—whose members are not always at their unclouded best in answering such a question—but to procure this book."

The Church Times

* With a new foreword by A. M. FARRER, D.D.

The Oxford Dictionary of the Christian Church

EDITED BY F. L. CROSS

'The lack of ordinary Christian knowledge is indeed remarkable and lamentable. For it goes with a keen popular appetite for religious discussion. . . . Clearly in this atmosphere of curiosity combined with ignorance, a source which can be turned to for the facts is serving an important social need. This the Oxford University Press supplies in a Dictionary of the Christian Church, just published under the editorship of Professor Cross.' The Times in a leader, 12 October 1957

'The range of knowledge covered is astonishing and formidable . . . nearly every one of the thousands of entries has its own bibliography.' Time and Tide

The bibliographies in the principal European languages are amazingly full and up to date. Yorkshire Post

Principles of Christian Worship

BY RAYMOND ABBA

As publishers of the Book of Common Order and other Church of Scotland books, A Book of Public Worship by John Huxtable and others, and other well-known works, the Oxford University Press have a special concern with worship in reformed churches. This new, clear, well-informed and level-headed book will be of great service to all—students, ministers, and laymen—who are in any way concerned with public worship or wish to understand it better.
