IN MEMORIAM

JOHN HUSS, director of the Michigan Municipal League and lecturer in political science, the University of Michigan, died in January, 1963.

KAZUO KAWAI, professor of political science at the Ohio State University, died of cancer in Columbus May 4, 1963, at the age of 59. Born in Tokyo in 1904, the son of a Protestant minister, he was brought to this country as a child and grew up in the Los Angeles area. He took his degrees at Stanford, in history: B.A., 1926; M.A., 1928; Ph.D., 1938; and taught at the University of California at Los Angeles, 1932-1941. On a trip to Japan in the summer of 1941 his return was cut off when travel between the two countries ceased in consequence of the presidential order freezing Japanese assets in this country. He became foreign news editor of the Nippon Times (now the Japan Times), the leading English-language daily, and held that post through the war; under the Occupation he was made editor-in-chief of the paper. In 1949 he returned to Stanford and came to Ohio State in 1951; he was naturalized a citizen in 1953 and appointed a full professor in 1959.

His newspaper experience under both regimes and his detached objectivity helped qualify him to write his best known work, Japan's American Interlude (1960). He was also a contributor to this REVIEW and other professional journals, on far eastern affairs. He is survived by his widow and by four sisters living in Tokyo.—HARVEY C. MANSFIELD
