MAJID KHADDURI Honored

Majid Khadduri, Director of the Center for Middle East Studies at The Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies in Washington, has been awarded the Order of Merit, First Class, by the government of Egypt.

In ceremonies held last month at the Egyptian Embassy in Washington, Ambassador Ashraf Ghorbal presented the decoration to Dr. Khadduri on behalf of President Ansar Sadat. Dr. Khadduri received the award in recognition of his extensive writings on the Middle East over the past 30 years. The Order of Merit is given to Egyptians and others who have made outstanding contributions in the arts, sciences, diplomacy and other fields.

A native of Iraq, Dr. Khadduri is a noted authority on Islamic law and Middle Eastern affairs. He earned his doctoral degree at the University of Chicago. After service in the Foreign Office in Baghdad he embarked on his academic career, teaching in Iraq, Libya, England and in many American universities including Chicago, Indiana, Columbia, Virginia and Vermont.

In 1949, Dr. Khadduri joined the SAIS faculty where he is University Distinguished Research Professor in Middle Eastern studies. He has written dozens of books and articles on legal and political problems of the Middle East. His latest book, Socialist Iraq, was published in March 1978. He is now working on a sequel to Arab Contemporaries in which he profiled many Arab leaders and personalities. The sequel will include a chapter on President Sadat whom Dr. Khadduri met with just after Sadat's memorable visit to Jerusalem last fall.

The Egyptian Order of Merit is the second decoration Dr. Khadduri has received from a Middle Eastern country. In 1954, he was awarded the Order of the Rafidain by the government of Iraq after Independent Iraq, his first book on that nation, was published by Oxford University Press.

DOUGLAS MCGREGOR Prize

The Journal of Applied Behavioral Science has announced the 1978 Douglas McGregor Prize to recognize excellence in the application of behavioral science. For 1978, the award will honor the best article exemplifying the interplay among theory, practice and values in any domain of planned change. An honorarium of $1,000 accompanies the award.

Articles should be 3,000 to 6,000 words in length, and submitted in quadruplicate no later than September 1, 1978, following the usual format for JABS. Articles should be sent to the Assistant to the McGregor Memorial Award Committee. NTL Institute for Applied Behavioral Science, Box 9155, Arlington, Virginia 22209.

Herbert A. Shepard, Chairman of the Award Committee, is pleased to announce the 1977 winner: "Reconciling 'Incompatible' Positions" by Jeffrey W. Eisman, University of Massachusetts.

POLITICAL PSYCHOLOGY Society

Scholars throughout the world with an interest in political psychology are now inviting those involved in similar concerns to join them in the newly founded International Society of Political Psychology. ISPP was formed this fall by leaders in psychiatry, government, anthropology, psychology, sociology and political science. Its purpose is to improve communication among scholars with different scientific, geographic and political viewpoints. The founders thus hope to increase the quality and breadth of work done, as well as the quality of working conditions, by firming the ties among those who belong to this "invisible university" of interest.

Several steps have already been taken to facilitate improved communication and foster scientific concern with more adequate theory and with pressing social problems. First, ISPP has contracted with Transaction, Inc. to handle its official quarterly journal, Political Psychology, which begins in November, 1978. Under the managing editorship of Jeanne N. Knutson, editors are now laying plans for sections which will make available articles, promote discussion of critical issues and review selected books. Editors include founders Joseph Adelson, Margaret Hermann, Nevitt Sanford, Hilde Himmelweit, Stanley Renshon and Daniel Lerner. General Editors of the Journal are Jeanne N. Knutson and David O. Sears.

Second, ISPP is holding its first annual scientific meeting, under the chairmanship of Harold D. Lasswell, at the Americana Hotel in New York City from September 2 through 4, 1978 in conjunction with the APSA Annual Meeting. Under the direction of Program Chairman Stanley Renshon, the meeting is developing as a stimulating intellectual meld of academicians and those with practical political experience from countries around the world. Information on the program is contained in the courtesy listing section of the preliminary program in this issue of PS.

In addition, a number of other steps have been taken to improve scholarly communication among political psychologists: co-sponsorship of panels at meetings of other organizations around the world, publication of a yearly Directory of Members by country and the formation of a Permanent Task Force on Data Dissemination and Utilization under three founding members with outstanding experience in the area: Warren Miller, University of Michigan; Hans D. Klingemann, ZUMA, Mannheim, West Germany; and Robert J. Mokken, Universiteit van Amsterdam. Through the efforts of this Task Force, ISPP members will receive expert advice on standardized means of data collection and knowledge of useable data collections around the world available for further analysis. A second Permanent Task Force is now being formed—this one on Mediation of Conflict.

Those interested in joining ISPP should write to Jeanne N. Knutson, Ph.D., Executive Secretary Pro-Tem, ISPP, 10837 Via Verona, Los Angeles, California 90024.

WASHINGTON Internships

The Washington Institute for Women in Politics of Mount Vernon College has announced a seven week summer internship program from June 5 to July 21. The program provides an opportunity to participate in politics with the nation's leading decision-makers. Students are placed in internships on Capitol Hill and with executive agencies, interest groups and journalists. They will work five days a week for the duration of the internship. Each Wednesday evening, the group will convene under the direction of a member of the faculty for a lecture and discussion. Mount Vernon College will grant six college credits for the internship. For further information, write to Dr. Susan Tolchin, Director, Institute for Women in Politics, Mount Vernon College, 2100 Foxhall Road, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20007.

Federal STATISTICS

A new program called the Statistical Data Reference Service is now available to help data users access federal statistics quickly and at low cost. The service is sponsored by the National Technical Information Service in the U.S. Department of Commerce, and is available through Data Use and Access Laboratories (DUALabs) of Arlington, Virginia. In response to specific data requests, information specialists who are knowledgeable about U.S. governmental data will provide references to federal statistical sources which can provide the needed data.

For each item of information requested, DUALabs makes a thorough search of all available references. A written report provides the requestor with precise descriptive information about the data source which contains the desired statistics. Names of individuals to be contacted for additional information and instructions for acquiring the data are also included. No charge is made if at least one data source cannot be identified.

Although the program was designed with the needs of state and local governments in mind, anyone with a data need can use the service for a small fee. Publicly available statistical data having research and administrative value are emphasized. DUALabs handles routine requests within five days, but rush requests can be accommodated in just two days. Requests can be submitted in writing or by telephone.

Anyone whose work involves the use of statistical data has probably experienced the frustration of locating statistical information in the federal bureaucracy. The federal government has produced measures, estimates, and projections pertaining to nearly every aspect of our national life, yet these data are usually difficult and time-consuming to find. The Statistical Data Reference Service will enable users to conduct less costly and more effective searches by providing a centralized information source.

Data Use and Access Laboratories is a nonprofit organization which specializes in helping people use publicly available data. To use the Statistical Data Reference Service or to receive a "Data REquest Form," call or write: NTIS Statistical Data Reference Service, c/o DUALabs, Suite 900, 1601 North Kent Street, Arlington, Virginia 22209; (703) 525-1480, extension 95.

CUNY UNITED NATIONS Workshops

The Graduate Center of the City University of New York will offer two workshop courses this summer. They are:

The Changing United Nations: 1978 Update is an intensive two-week seminar on the U.N., its problems and prospects, sponsored by the Ralph Bunche Institute on the United Nations and led by Joseph Harbert, for people interested in current world problems and the international institutions which are developing (or failing to develop) solutions. U.N. political activity in peace keeping, the law of the sea, arms control, human rights and de-colonization. Recent U.S. policy trends in international organizations. Many sessions will be held at the U.N. giving students a unique opportunity to engage international policy makers in face-to-face discussion on today's issues. Mondays, Wednesday, and Fridays, 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. (with one hour free for lunch), June 19 through June 30.

The United Nations and the World Trouble Spots. The course will explore the role played by the United Nations in the trouble spots of the world, including the Middle East, Cyprus and the southern African nations. Taught by Perumala Dayanidhi, it will seek to analyze the various methods used and assess the impact of the U.N. efforts to bring about a settlement. Students will meet in various forums and workshops with the members of the diplomatic community. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. (with one hour free for lunch), July 10 through July 21.

Both courses will be held at the City University Graduate Center, as part of the Summer Institute, 1978.

For further information and application material, write to Benjamin Rivlin, Dean of Research and University Programs, The Graduate Center, CUNY, 33 West 42nd Street, New York, New York 10036.

American University WASHINGTON SEMESTER

The spring of 1978 completes the thirteenth year as America's oldest, semester long, undergraduate experiential learning program in Washington, D.C. The Washington Semester Program began in 1947 under the leadership of The American University and five other colleges, Allegheny, Hiram, Oberlin, Westminster (Pa.), and the College of Wooster. Since that time, the Program has grown to include 171 colleges and universities in 39 states and Canada.

The core of the Washington Semester Program has traditionally included a series of seminars each week of the semester with practitioners in public affairs. These sessions, normally held in the offices of governmental decision makers and those who seek to influence policy, are coordinated by full-time faculty members from The American University. The role of the faculty member is directed toward working with the students in developing a framework whereby they are challenged to relate the world of the public official to the theories they encounter in assigned course materials. A major research project is also part of the course of study. An emphasis is placed on having students use Washington as a resource for their research, including data collection from government documents and personal interviews.

In 1969 an internship component was added to the Program. This 16-hour a week work experience has proved extremely popular with students while not overshadowing the academic nature of the Program. During the current academic year, several Washington Semester students have interned at the White House; in Congressional offices, including that of the Speaker of the House of Representatives; executive agencies; local government; and with numerous private groups including Common Cause, the National Organization for Women, and the American Enterprise Institute. Many alumni of the Program have gone on to hold prominent positions, e.g., Max Cleland, Director of the Veterans Administration; Margita White, Commissioner, Federal Communications Commission; and John Dean, Legal Counsel to the President.

A diversification of academic focus has occurred along with the growth of the Program. In addition to national government, the Washington Semester Program provides specialized offerings in foreign policy, international development, urban affairs, economic policy, justice, science policy, and American studies. The approximately 500 students each year, who are nominated by their home institutions to participate in the Program, select one of the above for their semester course of study.

Faculty interested in obtaining more information on the Washington Semester Program including procedures for institutional affiliation should write: Dr. David C. Brown, Executive Director, Washington Semester Program, The American University, Washington, D.C. 20016.

POLITICAL BEHAVIOR Journal

A new scholarly journal, Political Behavior, to be published quarterly beginning later this year, has been announced by APS Publications, Inc.

Political Behavior will focus on the combined disciplines of political psychology and political sociology, embracing political aspects of social and clinical psychology, social psychiatry and sociology, as well as political science. The new journal will publish papers reporting studies on political topics concerned with motivation, attitudes and attitude change, group and organizational behavior, power structure and decision making, social and political movements and partisanship.

The editor of Political Behavior is Samuel Long, Department of Political Science, Baruch College, CUNY, 17 Lexington Avenue, New York, New York 10010. An Editorial Board is composed of 50 professors of political science, psychology and sociology.

Subscription information is available from the publishers, APS Publications, Inc., 150 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York 10011.

FRENCH Public Administration Review

The Institute of International Public Administration has announced the publication of The Revue Francaise d'Administration Publique. Individuals interested in submitting material for publication or subscribing should write to Professor Michel Durupty, 2, avenue de l'Observatoire, Paris 6e, France.

PRACTICAL POLITICS Publication

The Center for the Study of Practical Politics has announced the publication of Practical Politics magazine. The magazine will be published bimonthly and is edited by Terry Lutes. For further information on the magazine and for subscriptions, write to Practical Politics, P.O. Box 2495, Springfield, Illinois 62705.

AAUP Council Members

Two political scientists, Norma C. Noonan of Augsburg College and Samuel K. Gove of the University of Illinois, Urbana, have recently been elected to the Council of the American Association of University Professors.

HEALTH AND HUMAN RESOURCES Journal

A new publication, the Journal of Health and Human Resources Administration, has been established to serve the practitioner and academic needs of the health and human resources administration communities.

Jack Rabin and Thomas Vocino of Auburn University at Montgomery are editors of the journal which will make its first appearance in August. Members of the editorial board include Robert Agranoff, Northern Illinois University; Robert A. Alford, University of California, Santa Cruz; Herbert A. Anderson, Connecticut Hospital Association; Laurin Baumhover, University of Alabama; Richard Tucher, National Institute on Drug Abuse; Gregory Buntz, University of Arizona; Evan L. Casey, Royal Alexandra Hospital, Canada; Robert Cole, Southland Hospital, Mobile, Alabama; Don C. Dodson, East Texas State University at Texarkana; Earl G. Dresser, Methodist Hospital, St. Louis Park, Minnesota; Paul X. Elbon, Galesburg Mental Health Center; Dan Fritz, University of Southern California; Robert T. Gołembiewski, University of Georgia; James O. Hepner, Washington University, St. Louis; and Roger Hildreth, Southland Hospital, Mobile, Alabama.

The editorial board also includes Lee Holder, University of Tennessee Medical Unit; Hobart C. Jackson, Stephen Smith Geriatric Center; Sagar Jain, University of North Carolina; George Johnson, Ohio State University; Michael L. Mann, Alabama Department of Public Health; Theodore R. Marmor, University of Chicago; Felix A. Nigro, University of Georgia; Gerald T. O'Neil, Metropolitan Dade County, Miami, Florida; Barbara Pomeroy, General Electric Corporation; Beryl Radin, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare; William J. Ranieri, Alabama Hospital Association; Haynes Rice, Howard University Hospital; and Elliott C. Roberts, Charity Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana.

The following symposia will be featured in the first four issues of JHRA: "Financing the Health Care System," edited by Richard Bucher, Ph.D.; "New Directions in Long Term Care," edited by Don Dodson, Ph.D.; "Citizen Participation in Human Resources Programs," edited by Robert Agranoff, Ph.D., and Beryl Radin, Ph.D.; "Management/Employee Relations in the Health Care System," edited by Felix Nigro, Ph.D.

Along with symposia, each issue of JHRA will have single articles, book reviews, summaries of federal decisions and reports, and announcements.

Those interested in subscribing may do so by sending $18 for four quarterly issues to Journal of Health and Human Resources Administration, Auburn University at Montgomery, Montgomery, Alabama 36117.

JAPAN Visiting Professorship

Saitama University in Japan has announced a visiting foreign professorship at its Institute for Policy Science for the academic year, 1978-79. The applicant must have a strong social science and/or engineering background and be interested in analyzing contemporary political, economic and social problems. The appointment is for six months, April 1 to September 30 or October 1 to March 31, 1979, or for twelve months from April 1 to March 31, 1979. Applications should be written in English and sent to the Institute by August 25. For further information write to Mizuho Ogawa, Director, Institute for Policy Science, Saitama University, Urawa, Saitama 388, Japan.

SAN JOSE STUDIES

San Jose Studies, a multidisciplinary journal published by San Jose State University, annually awards $100.00 to the best article, poem, or short story appearing in each volume. SJS appears three times annually in February, May, and November and publishes critical, creative, and informative writing in the broad areas of the arts, humanities, sciences, and social sciences. Manuscripts should be sent to the Editor, San Jose Studies, San Jose State University, San Jose, California 95192.

SOVIET AND EAST EUROPEAN Research

The National Council for Soviet and East European Research has been formed. It is an autonomous academic body with the following purpose: to develop and sustain a long-term, substantial and high-quality program of fundamental research dealing with major policy issues and questions of Soviet and East European social, political, economic, and historical development.

The Council will receive, through solicitation or otherwise, proposals for long- and short-term research projects responsive to its purpose stated above, and in relevant subject areas; and it will award contracts for such research projects as it judges appropriate. Research contracts funded by the Council will be public documents. It will not provide funds for classified projects nor will it accept or impose stipulations that would preclude open publication of research results.

In addition, the Council may, at its discretion, undertake the following activities:

- (i) It may sponsor or award contracts for meetings, workshops, conferences, consultations, pilot studies, and such other activities as it might judge appropriate to the design, stimulation, or facilitation of relevant research, and the publication of results.

(ii) It may encourage provisions for research assistants, the acquisition and processing of basic research materials, travel for research purposes, the development of bibliographic and other aids, training for special skills, and such other activities with a training value as it may judge desirable.

(iii) It may facilitate contact and cooperation among individual scholars, and between them and specialists in government and private enterprise.

The Council will not itself undertake to conduct research, nor will it issue the results of research in its own name. The individual Trustees of the Council and its employees will be barred, during their tenure, from receiving funds through any Council research contract.

The Council will seek to attract funds from a variety of federal departments for the purpose described above. In this effort, it will endeavor particularly to locate and obtain funds that might not otherwise be available for academic and scholarly institutions in the field of Soviet and East European Studies. The Council's relationship with all federal sources of funds will be public and such sources shall be identified as the Council's funding agencies.

The Council will deliver to its funding agencies the written products of research undertaken under its auspices, but investigators will retain the right to publish any results obtained.

The Council is still in the preliminary stages of organization, but expects to be in a position this year to fund a modest number of research projects from an initial pool of about $500,000 received from the Department of Defense. Eligibility for funding as principal investigator will be limited to scholars at the postdoctoral level (or equivalent foreign degree) for academic participants, and to an equivalent degree of maturity and professional achievement for those from other fields. The Council will consider proposals for both large (including collaborative) and small projects, to be submitted through institutions in the United States of America only. The Council is in the process of preparing guidelines for the preparation and submission of proposals. Individuals and institutions interested in receiving these materials, or future notices of the Council's operations, are requested to notify the Council by mail addressed to: The National Council for Soviet and East European Research, c/o Harvard University Mail Service, 1 Oxford Street, Cambridge, Massachusetts 02138. Requests will be honored as soon as the materials are available.

Scholars should be guided by the following subject matter in formulating research proposals for this year's competition:

1. The Operation of, and Long-Term Prospects for, the Soviet and East European Economies,

Including the Burden of Defense. Topics within this rubric might include the following: description and analysis of resource allocation and major structural interactions of the Soviet and East European economies; analysis of the extent of the defense effort and its interaction with the economy and society over time; specific strengths and weaknesses of the economic systems; constraints arising from demographic, technological or institutional factors, or from the supply of energy and resources; how strengths and weaknesses shape Soviet and East European development and policies, with identification of critical choices; Soviet and East European perceptions of these matters.

2. Long-Term Developments in Soviet and East European Foreign Policies, Especially as They Affect the United States. Subjects here might entail: Soviet perceptions of, and objectives in, the USSR's long-term relations with the United States; Soviet views of the role of military, economic, and other foreign policy instrumentalities in Soviet relations with the U.S.; prospects for relations among East Europe, the Soviet Union, and the U.S.; Soviet responses to evolving Sino-Soviet and Sino-American relations; Soviet views on the regional and global roles of the USSR and how these might change in the future.

3. Long-Term Trends in Soviet and East European Societies. Matters to be examined here would include such topics as: bureaucratic behavior and group interest articulation; nationality issues; implications of changing population patterns; the evolving domestic role of the military in the Soviet Union and in Eastern Europe; repercussions of cultural, religious, and social diversity; changing patterns of regime-society relations.

4. Soviet and East European Intentions, Objectives, and Policy Options. The focus here is on the range of options, actual and potential, open to Soviet and East European leaders in responding to domestic and international problems of the kinds subsumed under 1, 2, and 3 above; factors or actions, both foreign and domestic, that might influence any of these.

The Council's anticipated deadline for the submission of proposals is July 31, 1978, with notice of awards shortly after September 30. Meanwhile, a preliminary statement (not more than five pages) of the substance of research projects to be proposed, including a first estimate of direct costs, would be helpful to the Council, and principal investigators are encouraged to send such a statement before June 1, 1978.

The Council is an independent, not-for-profit corporation formed with the assistance of the Chancellor of the University of California, Berkeley; the Provost of the University of Chicago; the Presidents of Columbia University, Duke University, Harvard University, the University of Illinois, Indiana University, The University of Michigan, the University of Pennsylvania, Stanford University, and The American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies; and the Chairman of the Academic Council of the Kennan Institute for Advanced Russian Studies of the Wilson Center. They have severally designated the following individuals to be the Council's initial Board of Trustees: Professor Robert Campbell; Professor Alexander Dallin, Chairman; Professor Ralph Fisher; Professor Chauncy Harris; Professor Herbert Levine; Professor Richard Pipes; Professor Marc Raeff; Professor Nicholas Riasanovsky; Dr. Frederick Starr, Vice Chairman; Professor Donald Treadgold; Professor Vladimir Treml; Professor William Zimmerman. The Council has chosen Mr. Vladimir Toumanoff to be Executive Director and an Ex Officio Trustee.

Under contract from the Office of the Secretary of Defense, Harvard University is providing administrative support to the Council pending establishment of its own offices and funding, at which time the association with Harvard will be terminated.

URBANISM Journal

Urbanism Past and Present, a journal designed to facilitate the exchange of ideas between urbanists in the fields of the social and human sciences will welcome manuscripts. The biannual journal, which also presents surveys and bibliographies, is available on a yearly basis for $5.00. Send manuscripts or subscription orders to: Urbanism Past and Present, The University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, Department of History, P.O. Box 413, Milwaukee, Wisconsin 53201.

SUPREME COURT Publication

The "Documentary History of the Supreme Court of the United States, 1789-1800," supported by the Supreme Court Historical Society and the National Historical Publications and Records Commission, is undertaking a project to publish all documents which illuminate the development of the Supreme Court in its first decade. The editors are particularly interested in locating any correspondence of the following individuals:

Chief Justices: John Jay (1745-1829), John Rutledge (1738-1800), Oliver Ellsworth (1745-1807).

Associate Justices: John Blair (1732-1800), Samuel Chase (1741-1811), William Cushing (1732-1810), James Iredell (1751-1799), Thomas Johnson (1732-1819), Alfred Moore (1755-1810), William Paterson (1745-1806), Bushrod Washington (1762-1829), James Wilson (1742-1798).

Clerks of the Court: John Tucker, Samuel Bayard.

Attorneys General: Edmund Randolph, William Bradford, Charles Lee.

Unofficial Court Reporter: Alexander James Dallas.

Please forward all information to Dr. Maeva Marcus, The Supreme Court Historical Society, Suite 333, 1511 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005.

ANGLO-DUTCH Institute

The Anglo-Dutch Institute of Parliamentology and Parliamentics (ADIPP) was established to encourage the empirical and comparative study of Parliaments.

One research project in which the Institute is currently engaged focuses on the functioning of the European Parliament within the European Community, and the changing pattern of relationships between the European Parliament and the National Parliaments of the member states. A special Workshop devoted to this subject will be convened at the April 1978 sessions of the European Consortium of Political Research meeting in Grenoble.

A second project is concerned with the way in which legislation for the direct elections to the European Parliament was passed in the member states of the European Community. This project is financed by the Nuffield Foundation, and is holding meetings at the Universities of Sussex and Grenoble in January and April 1978, respectively.

A third ADIPP project is concerned with examining the legislative party systems of the member states of the European Community, and the ideological characteristics of the national, transnational, and supranational party systems of the community. A paper on this will be presented at the American Political Science Association meeting in September, 1978.

A fourth project is examining the institutional development of the European Parliament within the framework of the European Community, and is examining the ways which this development is likely to change following the holding of direct elections.

Other ADIPP projects include a study of the attitudes of the Jewish MPs in the British House of Commons, a study of the role of Dutch MPs in the plenary and committee sessions of the European Parliament, and an examination of the legislative outputs of a number of Western European legislatures.

Further information concerning the Institute and its activities can be obtained from its Chairman, Valentine Herman, Faculteit der Sociale Wetenschappen, Erasmus Universiteit, Postbus 1738, Rotterdam, The Netherlands; its secretary, Juliet Lodge, Department of Politics, University of Hull, Hull HU6 7RX, Yorkshire, England; or its Treasurer, Rinus van Schendelen, Faculteit der Sociale Wetenschappen, Erasmus Universiteit, Rotterdam.

CHARLESTON Records

The City of Charleston, South Carolina, incorporated in 1783, has undertaken the task of collection, arranging, and making available its records. Since the 1950s the bulk of the twentieth century materials have been stored most unsuitably in an abandoned incinerator. Other records have been kept in closets in City Hall and other municipal buildings. Two records analysts, employed last July through Comprehensive Employment Training Act funds, Marie F. Hollings and Philip Cromer, have been working under the general supervision of the Clerk of Council. In December, Margaretta Childs, former archivist at the College of Charleston, was added to the staff as director.

The materials partly processed include some of the records of municipal departments such as the miscellaneous records of the Treasurer's office, 1862-1922; those of the Fire Department, 1848-1957; of the Public Health Department, 1878-1953, and of charitable institutions, the Orphan House, 1790-1918 and the Poor House, 1790-1916. The Archives, located at 100 Broad Street, Charleston, South Carolina 29401, is open to the public five days a week from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

ROCCO TRESOLINI Lectureship

A new annual lecture series has been inaugurated at Lehigh University to honor the late Rocco J. Tresolini, Professor of Political Science at Lehigh University and Distinguished scholar in the field of American Government and Constitutional Law, to be entitled, "The Tresolini Lecture in Law." The series will be under the direction of Howard R. Whitcomb and will bring a speaker to the campus each year to discuss a variety of legal issues and their relationship to society.

WOMEN'S Reader

Violence Against Women is a proposed reader which will examine the sex-specific nature of the violence to which women are subjected. Among the topics to be included are sexual harassment, wife battering, rape, marital rape, and the sexual abuse of female children.

Manuscripts are solicited which are 15-25 pages in length, with a perspective which is historical, legal, political, policy-oriented, psychological, or sociological. The methodology may be that of a case study, statistical analysis, or theoretical formulation, but all manuscripts should take a feminist perspective and be sent by July 30, 1978.

If the manuscript is completed, it should be sent in duplicate to the editor. If you are presently working on a paper or have an idea for a paper, write and describe what you would like to do. While previously published papers will be considered, emphasis will be placed on those manuscripts which have not yet been published. Contact should be made with the editor, Ruth A. Schwartz, 2509 Avenue K, Brooklyn, New York 11210.

GERMAN Marshall Fund

The German Marshall Fund, established in 1972 by a gift from the Federal Republic of Germany in appreciation of American post-war recovery assistance, has a publication available describing its programs and activities. SCHOLAR-DIPLOMAT Program

The Scholar-Diplomat Seminar Program will begin its ninth year this fall. University faculty members spend a week in the State Department observing the foreign policy process at first-hand and discussing current policy issues. The Seminars bring together scholars, particularly younger Ph.D.s and government officers involved in making and executing foreign policy. More than 1400 scholars have participated in the program since its inception in 1969. One indication of the program's effectiveness is the fact that most new applications are received from scholars who have heard about the program from previous attendees.

To facilitate informal give-and-take discussion, the seminars are kept small (20 is the usual maximum). A key element of the program is the assigning of each scholar to a host officer whose interest most nearly matches that of the scholar. During the week the scholar views the host officer's work, discusses policy papers and contributes knowledge and ideas. Participating scholars receive a security clearance prior to the Seminar and are therefore able to read classified materials and discuss fully their host's work.

As part of the seminar several workshops are scheduled "for scholars only" during which candid, unbiased observations are drawn together by participants for a paper that is usually presented to the host bureau's Assistant Secretary and/or country directors. In some cases the paper is also forwarded to the Secretary of State.

In-depth sessions are arranged with the major organizational units of the Department, both geographic and functional. Similar sessions are also arranged with other government agencies involved in the foreign policy process.

Requests for application forms or for further information concerning the program should be addressed to: Scholar-Diplomat Seminars, National Capital Division, Office of Public Programs, Bureau of Public Affairs, Room 5831, Department of State, Washington, D.C. 20520; telephone (202) 632-3340.

A tentative schedule for academic year 1978-79 will be available after May 1, 1978.

POLICY STUDIES Organization

The Policy Studies Organization has been active in adding to its journal symposia during 1978. The spring symposium portion of its Policy

Studies Journal dealt with "Teaching Policy Studies" under the editorship of William Coplin. The summer symposium dealt with "Agricultural Policy" edited by Don Hadwiger, Richard Frankel, and William Brown. The autumn symposium will be on "Energy Policy" edited by Robert Lawrence and the winter symposium will be on "Minorities and Policy Studies" edited by Marian Palley and Michael Preston. There will also be a special symposium issue on "Police and Law Enforcement Policy," edited by Fred Meyer and Ralph Baker. These symposia will also be published in expanded book-length versions as part of the Policy Studies Organization series with Lexington Books of D.C. Heath and Company and a related series with Praeger Publishers of Holt, Rinehart, and Winston.

In addition to its five or so journal issues and book symposia per year, the Policy Studies Organization is also adding to its Yearbooks in Politics and Public Policy published through Sage Publications. The key 1978 volumes in that series will be one entitled Politics and Public Policy, edited by Aaron Wildavsky and Judith May, and one entitled Policy Studies and Public Choice, edited by Douglas Rae and Stephanie Cameron, based partly on papers presented at recent APSA conventions. Earlier in the year, the volume was published on Comparing Public Policies: New Concepts and Methods, edited by Douglas Ashford.

Other PSO activities include the summer 1978 publication of the Policy Research Centers Directory which describes numerous university and non-university research institutes with regard to their policy problems, clients, disciplines, funding, decision-making, hiring, desired research, suggestions for researchers, and suggestions for funding sources. Shortly thereafter the Policy Studies Personnel Directory will be published which describes individual subscribers to the Policy Studies Journal, Policy Analysis, and Public Policy with regard to their affiliation, education, policy problem interests, general approaches, publications, and current policy research. It will also contain indexes for facilitating interaction among policy people.

The Policy Studies Organization is currently headed by Dorothy James, with James Anderson as vice president and president-elect, and Stuart Nagel as secretary-treasurer. Dues are only $8 per year, which covers the quarterly journal, special issues, the directories, and one-third discounts on the books. Further information can be obtained from the Policy Studies Organization, 361 Lincoln Hall, University of Illinois, Urbana, Illinois 61801.
