

Retirements

Alan Engel, professor, department of political science, Miami University (OH).

John D. Hane, associate professor of political science, Central Missouri State University.

Donald W. Hanson, professor and chair, emeritus, department of political science, University of Utah.

Charles O. Jones, professor emeritus, department of political science, University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Sophia Peterson, professor emeritus, department of political science, West Virginia University.

Visiting and Temporary Positions

Matthew J. Doppke, visiting instructor, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame.

Arie Marcelo Kacowicz, visiting fellow, Helen Kellogg Institute for International Studies and the Joan B. Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies, and assistant professor, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame for 1997–98.

Timothy Krebs, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, Illinois Wesleyan University.

William G. Mayer, assistant professor of political science, Northeastern University has been named visiting professor, department of government, Harvard University, for 1997–98.

Margaret M. O'Callaghan, visiting associate professor, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame for 1997–98.

Simon Reich, visiting fellow, Helen Kellogg Institute for International Studies, and visiting professor, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame for Fall 1997 semester.

Richard F. Starr, senior fellow, Hoover Institution, Stanford University, has been named visiting research professor, department of international relations, Boston University from June 1997 to August 1999. Starr most recently published The New Military in Russia: Ten Myths That Shape the Image (Naval Institute Press).

Richard F. Starr

Bruce A. Wallin, assistant professor of political science, Northeastern University, has been selected to serve as a visiting professor at the Center for International Relations, Meiji University in Tokyo, Japan. Wallin will deliver fifteen minute lectures on American politics and deficit reduction, and conduct comparative research on both intergovernmental relations and deficit reduction.

Awards

1997 Guggenheim Memorial Foundation Fellowships

The John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation has awarded fellowships to 164 artists, scholars, and scientists for 1997. The fellows were selected "on the basis of unusually distinguished achievement in the past and exceptional promise for future accomplishments." Among the winners were three political scientists:

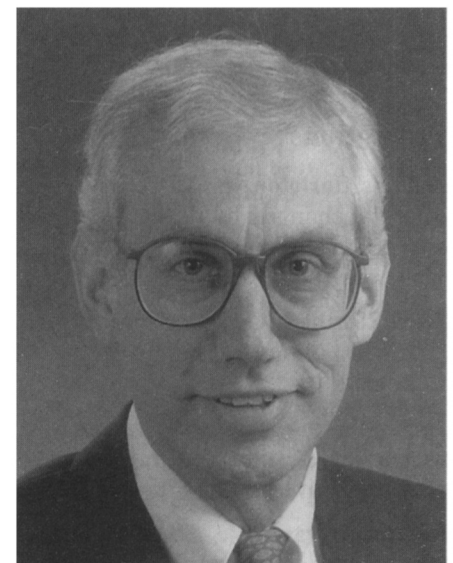

James E. Alt, professor of government, Harvard University and 1997 APSA Annual Meeting Program Co-Chair, for work on political parties, institutions, and fiscal policy.

James Miller, professor of political science and director, liberal studies program in the graduate faculty of political and social science, New School for Social Research, for work on a cultural history of rock n' roll.

Anthony Marx, associate professor of political science, Columbia University, for work on the nation-state and its exclusion. Marx has also been awarded fellowships from the Howard Foundation and the National Humanities Center. His book, Making Race and Nation: A Comparison of South Africa, the United States and Brazil, is forthcoming from Cambridge University Press.

1997 Johan Skytte Prize

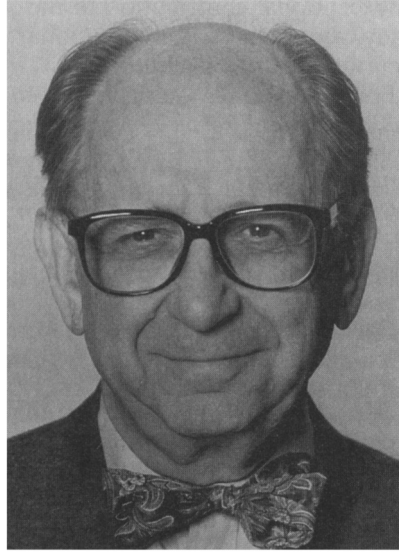

Arend Lijphart, Research Professor of Political Science, University of California-San Diego, and former APSA president, has been selected to receive the 1997 Johan Skytte Prize in Political Science. Presented annually by the Johan Skytte Foundation of Uppsala University, Sweden, Lijphart was recognized for his "theoretical and empirically path-breaking research on the function of consensus in democratic politics in divided as well as homogenous soci-

Arend Lijphart

Kudos . . .

Author of five books and more than 200 articles, Herbert C. Kelman has long been awarded the esteem of colleagues in the areas of international relations and social psychology. Recently, a further mark of professional regard was bestowed on him: in April, it was announced that Kelman would be the 1997 recipient of the University of Louisville Grawemeyer Award for Ideas Improving World Order. Presently the Richard Clarke Cabot Professor of Social Ethics at Harvard University, Kelman was cited by the awards committee for his research into “interactive problem-solving,” a method of negotiation by which a third-party is employed to settle longstanding international disputes.

Herbert C. Kelman

Kelman's 1965 book, International Behavior: A Social-Psychological Analysis has long been considered a seminal work in the psychology of international relations. Since then, Kelman has published prolifically on international relations and conflict resolution. In announcing the award, the committee cited three recent pieces as exemplars of his work in interactive problem-solving: “Social Psychological Dimensions of International Conflict,” in Peacemaking in International Conflict: Methods and Techniques, William Zartman and J. Lewis Rasmussen, eds. (1996); “Negotiation as Interactive Problem-Solving,” in International Negotiation (1996); and “Contributions of an Unofficial Conflict Resolution Effort to the Israeli-Palestinian Breakthrough,” in Negotiation Journal (1995).

Based on the fundamental principles of social psychology and human behavior, Kelman's approach to conflict resolution encourages a process he calls “joint thinking” whereby solutions to a conflict must satisfy the needs of both conflicting parties. A third party acts as an unofficial facilitator, who enables the two conflicting parties to take ownership of new ideas rather than seeing them as imposed by an outsider. This approach encourages creativity and invention between opposing sides. Kelman's work is often cited as instrumental in fostering the ongoing negotiations in the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Kelman is the past president of the International Studies Association and the International Society of Political Psychology.

In 1996, the Grawemeyer Award was bestowed on Max Singer and Aaron Wildavsky for their book The Real World Order: Zones of Peace/ Zones of Turmoil (1995). Now in its tenth year, the Grawemeyer Award carries with it a cash prize of $150,000.

eties. The award will be presented at a ceremony in Uppsala in October.

1997–98 Hoover Institution Fellows

The Hoover Institution of Stanford University has named recipients of the annual post-doctoral National and Peace Fellowships for the 1997–98 academic year. The National Fellows Program furnishes junior scholars an opportunity to spend one year at the Hoover Institution to conduct independent research on current or historical public policy issues of the twentieth century.

Among the 12 scholars named were six political scientists:

NATIONAL FELLOWS

Fiona E.S. McGillivray, assistant professor, department of political science, Washington University

Saryn L. O'Halloran, assistant professor, department of political science, Columbia University

Alastair M. Smith, assistant professor, department of political science, Washington University

Wen Fang Tang, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Pittsburgh

Edward W. Walker, director, Program in Soviet and Post-Soviet Studies, University of California-Berkeley

PEACE FELLOW

Diana E. Richards, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

Woodrow Wilson Center Announces 1997–98 Fellows

The Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars recently announced the appointment of 34 Fellows for the 1997–98 academic year. Among the recipients were five political scientists:

Thomas M. Callaghy, professor and chair, department of political science, University of Pennsylvania

People in Political Science

Gregory A. Flynn, Research Professor of International Affairs, Georgetown University

Francine R. Frankel, professor of political science, University of Pennsylvania

Peter J. Katzenstein, Walter J. Carpenter Jr. Professor of International Studies, Cornell University

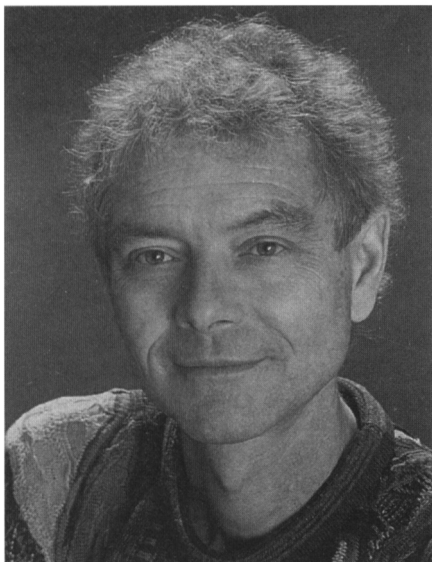

Philippa Strum, professor of political science, CUNY.

NEH Names Fellows

The National Endowment for Humanities recently named winners of its fellowship competition for college teachers and independent scholars. Among the winners named were Joanna Scott, Michigan State University, and Catherine Zuckert, Carleton College. Scott will pursue work on research entitled "Hannah Arendt Discovers America," while Zuckert will focus on "Plato's Philosophers."

Mershon Center Names Book Award Winners

The Mershon Center at Ohio State University recently announced the winners of the 1995, 1996, and 1997 Edgar S. Furniss Book Awards. The award, which commemorates the founding director of the Mershon Center, is given to books written by first-time authors that make an exceptional contribution to the study of national and international security. Winners include:

William Browne

For 1995: James Goldgeier, Leadership Style and Soviet Foreign Policy (Johns Hopkins University Press, 1994)

For 1996: Audie Klotz, Norms in International Relations: The Struggle Against Apartheid (Cornell University Press, 1995)

For 1997: Jonathan Mercer, Reputation and International Politics (Cornell University Press, 1996)

1997-98 EMIGRE Memorial German Internships

With the support of the German Federal Parliament (Bundestag), five German state legislatures (Landtage), and the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD), 11 students planning careers related to German affairs have been appointed to 1½ to 3 month periods of intensive work study stays in these bodies at varying points between June 1997 and March 1998. Most recipients are advanced undergraduates or graduate students, all are offered stipends, and all must be highly fluent in German, in addition to meeting other qualifications.

1997-98 interns, with institution of most recent study, are:

Ron Alquist, University of California-Santa Cruz

Iene Barnett, Kent State University

Laurie M. Carmichael, McMaster University

Laurie K. Dundon, Georgetown University

Arian Hassani, Brown University

Julia C. Kupfer, Amherst College

LiChuen Liao, Taipei University/Munich University

James P. Martin, Georgetown University

Gita Timmerman, Villanova University

Ryan J. Barilleaux

Stephanie A. Wickes, St. Edwards University (TX).

For further information and application materials for the 1998-99 program contact George K. Romoser, EMGIP, P.O. Box 345, Durham, NH 03824.

Other Awards

Sotirios A. Barber, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame, has received an ACLS fellowship for 1997-98 to write a book on welfare and the U.S. constitution.

Ryan J. Barilleaux, professor, department of political science, Miami University (OH), received that university's 1997 Outstanding Teacher Award.

John Bokina, professor of political science, University of Texas-Pan American, received a 1996-97 Outstanding Faculty Achievement Award for research.

William Browne, professor of political science, Central Michigan University, was the 1997 recipient of the President's Award, which recognizes the career achievements of senior CMU faculty members. The Award represents the University's most prestigious award for outstanding research and creative activity.

John Freeman, professor of political science, University of Minnesota, has been chosen for recognition with Honorable Mention citations for the Rowman & Littlefield Award for Innovative Teaching in Political Science.

Lawrence Jacobs, associate professor of political science, University of Minnesota, was awarded the Distinguished Essay Award, International Communication Association, Political Communication Division, for "Presidential Manipulation of Polls and Public Opinion: The Nixon Administration and the Pollsters."

Laura Langer, Ph.D. candidate, department of political science, Florida State University, was awarded a NSF doctoral dissertation grant for work on "The Determinants of Counter-majoritarian Behavior: State Supreme Courts and The Power of Judicial Review." Paul Brace serves as advisor.

Martha Merritt, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame, has received a research fellowship for 1997–98 from the Kellogg Institute for International Studies.

Kathleen Montgomery, assistant professor of political science, Illinois Wesleyan University, was elected the University's 1997 Professor of the Year for her outstanding teaching and student service contributions in an annual election by the student body.

Melissa Nobles, department of political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has been selected to serve as the next Cecil and Ida

Green Career Development Professor for a three-year term. This professorship recognizes and encourages excellence in teaching by gifted young faculty members.

Rosemary O'Leary, professor, School of Public and Environmental Affairs, Indiana University, had been awarded an Indiana University Board of Trustees Teaching Excellence Recognition Award.

Barry Rabe, associate professor, department of health management and policy, University of Michigan, has been awarded the Excellence in Teaching Award by the School of Public Health at Michigan. He is only the second recipient of the award. Rabe has also been named the co-recipient of the J.E. Hodgetts Award from the Institute of Public Administration of Canada for outstanding scholarly contribution to Canadian public administration.

Steven Rosenstone, professor of political science and dean, College of Liberal Arts, University of Minnesota, has been elected a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

W. Phillips Shively, professor of political science and provost, University of Minnesota, was awarded the "Outstanding Book of 1997" by the National Association of Black Political Scientists for his book, Cross-Level Inference (co-authored with Chris Achen).

Henry B. Sirgo, professor of political science, McNeese State University, has been named the Players Riverboat Casino Academic Professor for the 1997–98 academic year. Sirgo will use his award to work on a project entitled, "The Brothers Udall: Institutionalizing Environmentalism."

John Sullivan, professor of political science, University of Minnesota, received the Faculty Mentor Award from the Women's Caucus for Political Science of the APSA, for mentoring women graduate students.

Edward R. Tufte, professor of political science, statistics, and computer science, Yale University, has been named the 1997 honorary fellow of the Society for Technical Communication for "advancing the art and practice of effective visual communication" in his books Visual Display of Quantitative Information, Envisioning Information, and Visual Explanations: Images and Quantities, Evidence and Narrative and in his consulting work. Previous winners of the award include R. Buckminster Fuller, Herbert A. Simon, and Donald Norman.

Stephen L. Wasby, professor of political science at the University of Albany-SUNY, will be Bissell-Fulbright Chair in Canadian-American Relations at the University of Toronto for 1997–1998.

Ross Zucker, assistant professor of political science, Yeshiva University, has been named Outstanding Faculty Member of 1997 by University students. The award was presented in recognition of Zucker's dedication, hard work, and constant level of excellence in teaching.