Popular Fiction Before Richardson

By JOHN J. RICHETTI, Columbia University. This is a study of those prose narratives which were written and widely read in England during the first forty years of the eighteenth century, but which have been hitherto neglected or despised by historians of the novel. The author makes no claims for these works as literary achievements. They are seen rather as vigorous and highly successful commercial exploitations of enduring stereotypes, like the criminal, the traveler-merchant, the persecuted maiden, and the aristocratic seducer.

Between 1812 and 1820, Wordsworth published The Excursion, The White Doe of Rylstone and the first collected edition of his shorter poems. In 1819 he published two long poems written in earlier years—Peter Bell and The Waggoner. He also wrote in 1818-19 The River Duddon series of sonnets. His letters, besides illustrating his activities as a poet, a Distributor of Stamps and his eager concern about politics, show him dealing with business matters, sales of land, etc., which fell to him as executor of his brother Richard.
