The Journal of Transport History

Established in 1953, this was the first Journal to be devoted to the history of transport as a whole, in all its branches, ancient and modern. It has attained a high reputation for the quality and range of the papers it has published.

A New Series of the Journal was started in 1971, and appears twice yearly, in February and September. Each volume comprises four issues: each issue includes about 64 pages, in size $9\frac{3}{4} \times 7\frac{1}{4}$ inches. The comprehensive character of the First Series has been maintained, and the Journal continues to include book reviews as well as articles. One of its leading features is an annual bibliography of periodical articles and official publications in transport studies.

The annual subscription rate is £2.00 (U.S. $6.00); single copies £1.25; post free. Further details of the New Series and a list of back issues of the First Series are available on request. The Editorial Committee welcomes the submission of articles for consideration, which should be sent to the Editor at this address.

Economic Growth and Social Equity in Developing Countries

Irma Adelman and Cynthia Taft Morris. Based on a careful analysis of economic and political data from 74 underdeveloped countries for the period 1957-68, this remarkable study convincingly demonstrates that the economic development programs of the 1950's and 1960's have done nothing to alleviate human misery. Indeed, the initial effect of economic development is invariably to decrease both political participation and the relative share of the poor in the national income, and even in absolute and long-run terms its prospect of increasing human welfare is questionable. The authors' findings represent the first large-scale application of the methodology of their well-known book Society, Politics, and Economic Development: A Quantitative Approach (1967). $8.95

Japanese Economic Growth Trend Acceleration in the Twentieth Century

Kazushi Ohkawa and Henry Rosovsky. This study, which emphasizes the dramatic growth of the Japanese economy since World War II, attempts to fit Japan's experience into a historical growth model of the type familiar to economists. After a brief historical introduction, the authors establish the basic pattern of Japan's twentieth-century growth and discuss such topics as factor inputs and the aggregate residual, sectoral growth patterns and inter-sector relations, the demand and supply for labor, and foreign trade. The authors present the outlines of a historical model designed to explain long swings and trend acceleration in this century, an analysis of institutional innovation and Japan's rising social capability to import advanced technology, and conclude with a look at Japan's economic future. $15.00

ENTERPRISE AND NATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

ESSAYS IN CANADIAN BUSINESS AND ECONOMIC HISTORY
Edited by GLENN PORTER AND ROBERT CUFF

These essays deal with a wide range of important topics in the interaction of business, government, and society in Canada. Their value is two-fold. As careful explorations of Canadian history, they provide important insights into the Canadian past. But the issues they treat are still with us, and these essays make important contributions to the continuing debate over such enduring issues as the mainsprings of national identity, the impact of foreign influence on the economy, the search for economic growth, and the optimum relationship between federal and provincial governments in shaping national development.

These essays appeared originally in Business History Review. Contributors: Glenn Porter, Christopher Armstrong, H. V. Nelles, Michael Bliss, T. W. Acheson, Stephen Scheinberg, Patricia E. Roy, Alan Wilson. 138 pp. $2.50/$6.95.
