Management Training for Psychiatrists

Edited by Dinesh Bhugra and Alistair Burns

This is the first book specifically written to help psychiatrists and other doctors cope with the changing management structures and management roles within the National Health Service. Both theoretical and practical issues are covered, and the basics of managing people, resources, time, stress, change, audit and many other areas are laid out clearly. This book is a necessity for all senior registrars hoping to become consultants, and will be useful for all health professionals.
