

From the Editor

WITH THIS ISSUE, Marshall Schminke ends his tenure as an associate editor for Business Ethics Quarterly. Marshall has been in that position since late 2006, and all of us have been extremely grateful for his dedicated, careful, and thoughtful work for BEQ, both with regard to his handling of manuscripts assigned to him and also regarding a wide range of decisions and questions that arise in the course of producing Business Ethics Quarterly. The other editors and I will miss his enthusiastic commitment to BEQ, but Marshall assures me that he will remain one of BEQ's strong supporters in the academic world. Editorial demands will not exactly drop off for Marshall, however, as this month he is starting a term as associate editor for the Journal of Management. Given that before starting at BEQ, he was an associate editor for the Academy of Management Journal, this string of positions might qualify him for an "everyone's favorite associate editor" prize. We wish him success in this new role.
