A Concise Economic History of the World

From Paleolithic Times to the Present

RONDO CAMERON, Emory University

Grounded in modern economic theory but written in non-technical language accessible to non-specialists, this comprehensive history highlights events that have contributed to prosperity and material well-being—that is, to “development”—as well as those that have resulted in continued “underdevelopment” for large areas of the world. The first half of the book surveys world history from ancient times to the eighteenth century, outlining the origins of Western prosperity. The second half investigates in detail the industrialization and urbanization that transformed Europe and America in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Cameron places the contemporary world economy in broad historical perspective, making both the East-West rivalry and the North-South split more understandable. With its predominantly narrative style, Economic Development in History is invaluable for upper division and graduate courses in economic history and economic development.

Saving Capitalism

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the New Deal, 1933–1940

James S. Olson

James Olson contends that the little-studied Reconstruction Finance Corporation was the major New Deal agency, even though it was the product of the Hoover Administration. Pouring more than ten billion dollars into private businesses during the 1930s in a strenuous effort to "save capitalism," the RFC was the largest, most powerful, and most influential of all New Deal agencies, proving that the main thrust of the New Deal was, in fact, state capitalism.

The Frozen Revolution

An Essay on Jacobinism

Ferenc Feher

Feher argues that the distinctive, celebrated world-historical pronouncements to which Jacobinism gave rise in fact derived from immediate economic circumstances, and that much of its subsequent impact has stemmed from its critique (protosocialist) of contemporary British industrial capitalism.
