New publications

The African Journal of Psychiatry is due to be back in circulation after a break of nearly fifteen years. While the Journal style of the previous series will be largely retained, some modifications will be necessary in order to bring the new series up to contemporary standards. Further information or those wishing to submit articles for publication, books for review or subscriptions should contact Professor Olufemi Morakinyo, Editor in Chief, African Journal of Psychiatry, c/o Department of Mental Health, Obafemi Awolowo University, Ile-Ife, Nigeria.

Assessment of Mental Capacity: Guidance for Doctors and Lawyers—A joint report of the BMA and the Law Society, has been published by the British Medical Association and is available at £8.95 from the BMA and the Law Society Shop (Telephone: 0171 242 1222).

Making Sense of Treatments and Drugs: ECT, has been produced by MIND in an attempt to improve the information available to patients about ECT treatment. This is available from MIND Publications for £2.50. Further information: MIND, 15-19 Broadway, Stratford, London E15 4BQ.

The World Health Organization has produced a set of Behavioural Science Learning Modules in order to provide Schools of Medicine and others within the health area with materials to improve the teaching of issues related to health and behaviour. Recent modules aimed specifically at communication aspects of health care are Communicating Bad News (to patients), Introducing Parents to their Abnormal Baby, and Improving Adherence Behaviour with Treatment Regimens. Other modules are available, focusing on clinical material. Further information: WHO Programme on Mental Health, 1211 Geneva 27, Switzerland (Fax: ++41 22 791 0746).
