Authors interested in contributing should send a brief abstract of their proposal research to Terry F. Buss, Center for Urban Studies, Youngstown State University, Youngstown, Ohio 44555.

Details of symposium will be forwarded on receipt of abstract. Final manuscripts will be due September 30, 1982. □

Announcements

Taft Sites Selected For Summer Programs

Twenty sites have been selected for the 1982 Taft Seminars for Teachers, Marilyn Chelstrom, President of the Robert A. Taft Institute of Government, has announced.

These summer seminars are held for teachers, administrators, and librarians in elementary and secondary schools. Participants explore American politics with scholars and practicing politicians in an effort to make government and politics come alive to the teachers and subsequently to their students. Topics typically include the Constitution, the two-party system, Congress, state legislatures, city councils, the press, political decision-making, and citizen participation.

Taft Seminars offer academic credit, tuition, texts, and other allowances for participants and are funded entirely through individual and corporate contributions. The Taft Institute is a non-profit, non-partisan educational public foundation. Contributions to Taft are tax-deductible.

For information on the individual seminars, contact the local director, listed below. For more general information on the seminars, contact Marilyn Chelstrom, The Robert A. Taft Institute of Government, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York, New York 10017, (212) 682-1530. The sites and directors for 1982 are:

Presidency Group Welcomes Scholars

The Presidency Research Group is an organization of scholars working in academia, government, the press, and other institutions who are interested in research on chief executives. Now in its fourth year, APSA members are invited to join this rapidly growing organization. Each year the Group sponsors a series of panels on chief executives and a general membership meeting at the Annual Meeting of the American Political Science Association. Norman Thomas of the University of Cincinnati is organizing these panels for the 1982 meeting in Denver.

The principal activity of the Presidency Research Group is the publication of a semiannual newsletter. Each issue contains

- comprehensive bibliographies of recent books, articles, and convention papers on chief executives,
- bibliographies on relevant specialized topics,
- short "point of view" articles,
- current research activities of members,
- PRG organizational news and convention panels, and
- information on research funding and data availability.

The newsletter is a valuable source of information for scholars and students studying and teaching about chief executives.

Membership in the Presidency Research Group costs $3 per year and includes the price of a subscription to the newsletter. Checks should be sent to Secretary-Treasurer: Martha Kumar, Department of Political Science, Towson State University, Baltimore, Maryland 21204.

1982 Summer School On European Politics

The European University Institute is organizing the fourth Summer School on Comparative European Politics to be held in Florence from June 21 to July 9, 1982.

The Summer School will admit up to 30 scholars, who should be university teachers or advanced doctoral students currently engaged in research work within the subject areas of the Summer School.

The aim of the program is to promote the comparative understanding of political development in Western Europe by offering an advanced program of lectures and seminars by leading international specialists. It is expected to act as a catalyst for future research and teaching in European universities.

The Academic Program

The Academic Program of the 1982 Summer School will have as a major theme the problems of The Future of Party Government, on which an extensive research project has been initiated by Rudolf Wildenmann, head of the Department of Political and Social Sciences of the European University Institute, and is being carried out in cooperation with a number of leading scholars throughout Europe.

The faculty of the Summer School will be mainly drawn from members of the research team of this project who are all leading experts in the comparative study of party systems, and will consist of Hans Daalder (Director of the Summer School), Ian Budge, Roland Cayrol, Karl W. Deutsch, Edward N. Muller, Gianfranco Pasquino, Gunnar Sjoblom and Rudolf Wildenmann, among others.

In addition, particular attention will be devoted to the comparative analysis of Southern European political systems, with special emphasis on Italy, in a series of lectures offered by leading Italian political scientists coordinated by Stefano Passigli.

Informal seminars in the afternoon will provide occasions for discussing the themes presented during the morning lectures. During these seminars participants are expected to present their own research work for general discussion by faculty members and other participants in the Summer School. Lectures and seminars will be conducted in English.

Admission

Admission to the Summer School will be based on the record of individual applicants. Each candidate is asked to submit:

- a short curriculum vitae, giving details of university degree(s), and past and present positions held;
- a list of publications;
- a statement on current research interests;
- the names of two referees who know the academic work of the applicant;
- a statement on knowledge of languages.

Applications and all requests for further information should be addressed as soon as possible to: Lea Campos Boralevi, Organizing Secretary, Summer School on Comparative European Politics, European University Institute, Badia Fiesolana, Via dei Riccottini, 50016 San Domenico di Fiesole, Italy.

Applications should be lodged no later than May 15, 1982.

Finance

Applicants are advised that it is essential to contact their own universities or national grant-awarding bodies as soon as possible with a view to obtaining financial support for their attendance at the Summer School. It is hoped that the School will receive one or more grants similar to those awarded in previous years. This would enable the Summer School to contribute towards participants' travel and/or per diem expenses.

Summer Program Offered On Quantitative Methods

The Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research Training Program in Quantitative Methods of Social Research is a comprehensive, integrated program of studies in research design, statistics, data analysis, and social methodology. The Training Program's instructional environment differs from that of all but a few statistics departments in at least two respects:

1) Methods of quantitative analysis are conveyed as part of the broader context of substantive social science research;

- 2) To the degree appropriate all instruction is coordinated with and reinforced by active, participatory, data analytic experiences.

The Summer Training Program schedule is divided into two four-week sessions with instruction organized in lecture, seminar, and workshop formats. The first session will be held from June 28 until July 23 and the second session is scheduled from July 26 until August 20.

Program Design

The ICPSR Training Program is partitioned into three instructional tracks that are designed to satisfy the diverse research methodology needs and interests of most college and university faculty and graduate students in the social sciences.

Track I of the Training Program's curriculum consists of three courses: Elementary Mathematics for Social Scientists (lecture), Introduction to Computing (lecture), Introduction to Statistics and Data Analysis I (lecture/workshop).

These courses provide those college and university faculty and research scholars who are attempting to develop or upgrade their quantitative competencies with a basic integrated instructional program designed for that purpose.

Track II of the Training Program consists of 12 courses: Mathematics for Social Scientists (lecture), Mathematical Models of Social Phenomena (lecture), Experimental Studies (workshop), Introduction to Statistics and Data Analysis II (workshop), Introduction to Linear Models (workshop), Intermediate Linear Models (workshop), Applied Nonparametric Analysis (workshop), Multivariate Dimensional Analysis (workshop), Evaluation Research Methodology (lecture), Measurement Problems in the Social Sciences (lecture), Scope and Methods of Complex Survey Designs (lecture), Exploratory Data Analysis (workshop).

Prerequisites for the workshops at the Track II level are an elementary college algebra course and a solid introductory course in applied statistics. Participants who enroll in the workshops will divide their time between attending classes and completing structured data analysis projects.

Track III courses fall into three categories. First, are those courses that belong to the statistics curriculum of the Training Program and will be meaningful only to participants who have satisfied prerequisites from Track II. In some cases, the content of these courses is on the frontier of the development of social methodology. They are: Advanced Topics in Statistical Modeling (workshop), Applied Multivariate Analysis (workshop), Causal Models (workshop), Discrete Multivariate Analysis (workshop), Models with Unmeasured Variables (workshop), Time Series Analysis (workshop).

Second, are those courses that are substantively oriented. The instructional focus is on the application of quantitative methods of analysis to particular substantive areas rather than on the learning of new statistical and mathematical techniques: *Empirical Research Issues in Aging (workshop), *Quantitative Analysis of Crime and Criminal Justice (workshop), Quantitative Historical Analysis (workshop), *Asian American Research Methods (workshop), *Empirical Research and Gender Issues (workshop). (*Stipend support is available.)

Finally, are those short workshops that address many of the common concerns of computing specialists and data librarians: Utilization of Data Resources from the 1980 Census (6/28-7/2), Current Microcomputer Applications (6/28-7/2, also 7/10-7/11).

Application and Admission

Admission to the ICPSR Training Program in Quantitative Methods of Social Research is arranged through the ICPSR Official Representative at Consortium member institutions. Information about the Program may be obtained directly by writing to: Henry Heitowit, Administrative Coordinator, ICPSR Training Program, P.O. Box 1248, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106; (313) 764-8392. □

Denver Plans Summer Institute

The Graduate School of International Studies, University of Denver, will offer a special three-week Institute in Psychology, Decision Making and International Politics from July 19 to August 6, 1982. The Institute will feature four intensive three-week courses on such topics as Operational Codes, Perception and Misperception, Crisis Management, and Decision Making. The distinguished faculty will include Ole Holsti, Duke University; Robert Jervis, Columbia University; Stephen Walker, Arizona State University; and Karen Feste and Arthur N. Gilbert of the Graduate School of International Studies.

For further information on this program, write to: Arthur N. Gilbert, Associate Dean, Graduate School of International Studies, University of Denver, Denver, Colorado 80208. □

15th Essex Summer School Features Data Analysis

The Essex Department of Government and European Consortium for Political Research will be sponsoring the 15th school, to be held at Essex in three continuous but independent sessions from July 9 to August 20, 1982.

Special Emphasis will be on introductory courses for participants who lack any training in statistics or computing. Full supporting interactive computing facilities, including the use of micro-computers, will be available. Among the courses offered will be:

Introductory Level: Introduction to Data Analysis with SPSS, Mathematics for Social Scientists, Introduction to Regression and Causal Modelling.

Intermediate and Advanced Level: Basic Scaling, Theories of Social Choice, Cluster Analysis, Factor Analysis, Linear Structural Relationships, Survey Design, Analysis of Textual Data, Multidimensional Scaling, Analysis of Contingency Tables, Time Series and Forecasting, Graph Theory and Analysis.

Financial support may be available to participants from their own institutions or National Research Councils. The organizers particularly wish to attract advanced students, researchers and academics. Interested persons should write to: The Organizing Secretary, 15th Essex Summer School, Department of Government, University of Essex, Colchester CO4 3Sq, England. □

Labour Party Offers Socialist Magazine

New Socialist, the magazine of political theory and debate of the Left, is a new publication from the Labour Party. It is the first magazine of policy and socialist philosophy in the party's 80-year history. The primary purpose of the journal is to develop analysis and debate about the principles of democratic socialism. Each issue will fall into sections on the following themes:

- the development of Labour Party policy,
- a major debate of a key policy area,
- analysis of the political scene at home and abroad,
- aspects of Labour movement history.

The content of the New Socialist will also reflect the movements which have developed outside the formal party structures, such as the rise of feminism, the growth of community politics and the reemergence of unilateralism. Contributors to the first two issues will include: Raymond Williams on socialism today; E. P. Thompson interviewing Michael Foot; Bernard Crick on the crisis of social democracy; Tony Benn on Britain as a colony; Michele Barrett on an alternative strategy for women; Lewis Minkin on the trade union block vote; Noam Chomsky on El Salvador; and Peter Townsend conducting an inquiry into social policy. The editor of the magazine is James Curran. Subscriptions (outside of Britain) are: £6.50 for individuals; £12.00 for institutions. Sample copies may be requested from: New Socialist, 150 Walworth Road, London SE17. □

Popper Newsletter Offered

An international, interdisciplinary newsletter for individuals interested in the philosophy of Karl Popper and its applications has been launched at the University of Guelph. Its purpose is to improve communications among those intrigued by Popper's views (whether supportive or critical), who are scattered across a wide array of practical and theoretical disciplines and professions, as well as being divided into national scholarly communities.

Anyone interested in receiving this newsletter should write to the editor, Fred Eidlin, Department of Political Studies, University of Guelph, Guelph, Ontario, Canada N1G 2W1. An informal get-together of political scientists interested in Popper's philosophy will be held at the APSA Annual Meeting in Denver. □

Publius Changes Staff and Address

Publius: The Journal of Federalism published by the Center for the Study of Federalism at Temple University, Philadelphia, and edited by Daniel J. Elazar is pleased to announce appointments of an Associate Editor and a new Book Review Editor. Manuscripts should now be sent to John Kincaid, Department of Political Science, North Texas State University, Denton, Texas 76203-5338. Books for review should be sent to Donald S. Lutz, Department of Political Science, University of Houston, Houston, Texas 77004.

Recent topical issues of Publius which may interest scholars include: American Political Culture; Covenant, Polity and Constitutionalism; and American State Constitutions. Forthcoming issues include: Cities of the Prairie; Block Grants; and Canadian Federalism. □

Case Studies Feature Nationhood and Separatism

A new series of interdisciplinary colloquia and symposia on The Quest for Nation-

hood, Submerged Nations, and Separatism will commence at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee (UW-M) late spring 1982 and extend into the next two academic years. There were several sessions in the past, including those at the UW-M and at the APSA and American Sociological Association Annual Meetings last year. The members of the APSA are most welcome to participate in this project by offering more case studies.

In addition to the colloquia series at the UW-M, several sessions on submerged nations and separatism will be organized at the APSA Annual Meeting in Denver, September 2-4, 1982, under the umbrella of the same unaffiliated group as last year. Anyone desiring to participate should write immediately in order to meet the APSA's deadlines for printing of the final program, because this group will not appear in the preliminary program.

A tentative theoretical framework using the works of Ernest Renan, Max Weber and others has been developed to test various case studies. This framework and a model bibliography on one particularly significant case study are available. For more information write to Max Weber Colloquia and Symposia at the UW-M, P.O. Box 285, Brookfield, Wisconsin 53005, or call Vatro Murvar (414) 963-4295 on Tuesdays or Thursdays and 963-4388 for messages. □

International Organization Announces Special Issue

International Organization is pleased to announce the publication of a special issue, guest-edited by Stephen Krasner of Stanford University, on International Regimes.

In IO's tradition of special issues that link theoretical innovation with political relevance, International Regimes is devoted to a significant concept for elucidating international relations. Contributors include guest editor Krasner, Benjamin Cohen, Ernest Haas, Raymond Hopkins, Robert Jervis, Robert Keohane, Charles Lipson, Donald Puchala, John Ruggie, Arthur Stein, Susan Strange, and Oran Young. They consider such topics as balance-of-payments financing, factors affecting international economic order, trade regimes and security regimes, as well as examining the very concept of regime, its validity, significance, and limits.

Appearing as the spring 1982 issue of IO (volume 36, number 2), International Regimes was mailed to subscribers in late April. Subscription inquiries and single-issue orders should be addressed to IO's publishers, MIT Press Journals, 28 Carleton Street, Cambridge, Massachusetts 02142. □

Software Exchange, Newsletter Planned

The Public Service Research and Computer Laboratory of the Department of Political Science and Public Administration, North Carolina State University, is planning to issue a national newsletter for political scientists interested in micro-computing applications.

The laboratory is also interested in providing a software exchange program for political scientists, on an at-cost basis. This would be on the Apple microcomputer but other machines would be covered as well. Interest meetings at the APSA annual convention may also be organized if there is enough interest.

In this announcement we are seeking letters of interest in any or all of these three projects. Your letter will put you on our mailing list. Please send correspondence to: G. David Garson, Chairperson, Department of Political Science and Public Administration, North Carolina State University, Raleigh, North Carolina 27650. □

International Library On Women in History Available in Microform

The Microfilming Corporation of America has recently produced Women in History, 13 microform collections about the organizations which and individuals who sought equal expression for women. Periodicals, essays, personal correspondence, memoirs, biographies, organizational minutes, financial records, photographs and other documents enable researchers to explore the motivations, beliefs, actions, and consequences of women who affected modern history.

The microform edition of the Gerritsen Collection provides in a single resource, an entire international library relating the experiences of women both in the public arena—suffrage, the professions, education—and in the home. This library of 4,471 monograph titles and 265 periodical collections was begun in the late 19th century by Aletta Jacobs Gerritsen, a leading feminist and the Netherlands' first woman doctor.

She and her husband, Carl Gerritsen, brought together continental European materials printed in French, German, Dutch, Italian, Swedish, Norwegian, Danish, Czech, Hungarian, Spanish, Portuguese, Greek, Arabic, Latin, Polish, Russian, and English (printed in the U.S., Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the U.K.). In 1903, the Gerritsens' original collection was acquired by the John Crerar Library in Chicago and enriched with additional material focusing on the American women's movement.

The Kenneth Spencer Research Library at the University of Kansas acquired the collection in 1954 and it is from its holdings that the microform collection was produced. The editors of the microform edition have further enhanced the collection with the addition of materials from the major women's history holdings of the Walter Clinton Jackson Library at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Monographs

Monographs in the collection reflect the Gerritsens' multilingual capabilities and interest in amassing a library for comparative studies of the international women's movement and women's attitudes and aspirations both in the home and the public arena. Major monograph topics include: marriage, home, and motherhood; anti- and pro-feminism; Congress, meetings, and lectures; women and war; education; employment; volunteer and philanthropic work; women and the arts; organizations and clubs; suffrage; legal status; women and religion.

Monographs (including pamphlets) are available in language series:

- English Monograph Titles (2,236): This collection represents a valuable collection for tracing the origins and growth of the suffrage and feminist movements in the English-speaking world. Also included are satires on women as their demands for equal rights increased, and dissertations on the physiology and psychology of women.
- German Monograph Titles (929): Included are writings on early feminist activities after the Revolution of 1848 and later works by leading feminists and jurists. Specific areas of interest include women and socialism, major women's conferences from 1869, and the German and Swiss women's movements.
- French Monograph Titles (734): The French monographs offer valuable scholarly surveys, biographies, autobiographies, pamphlets, histories, comparative studies, poems, and literary writings on a wide range of topics such as the role of women in industry, women in the military, prostitution laws, and feminist activities.
- Additional Monographs printed in Twelve Languages: The remaining monographs focus on comparative studies of the international women's movement.

Periodicals

Among the 265 periodical titles mostly collected between 1860 and 1900, there are 47 British periodicals; 80 American; 59 German; 24 French; 20 Dutch; 12 Scandinavian; and 9 Slavic language issues. Nearly all of these can be found in complete runs.

Guide

For further information, a three-volume printed guide is available, arranged as follows: Volume I: Monograph and Periodical Language Series; Volume II: Subject Series—Monographs; Volume III: Periodicals.

Guide and microfilms are available from: Microfilming Corporation of America, 1620 Hawkins Avenue, P.O. Box 10, Sanford, North Carolina 27330. □

Canadian Studies Group Opens Washington Office

On March 1, 1982, the Association for Canadian Studies in the United States opened its secretariat at 1776 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Suite 225, Washington, D.C. 20036. ACSUS, founded in 1971, seeks to promote interest in Canadian studies at all educational levels. It assists with research, program design and publication. While a great number of its members are in the field of political science, the membership represents a diversity of disciplines and occupational interests.

Members receive three issues per year of the interdisciplinary journal, The American Review of Canadian Studies, as well as the biannual ACSUS Newsletter which provides information on programs, conferences and publications in Canadian studies. The ACSUS biennial conference provides a forum for scholarly discussion and assists with the development and implementation of programs in Canadian studies. For further information, contact Ellen R. Babby, executive officer, at the above address, or call (202) 822-8688. □

Library of Congress Revises Hispanic Directory

The Hispanic Division of the Library of Congress, with the joint support of the Tinker Foundation and the Organization of American States, has begun compilation of a new, completely revised and updated third edition of the National Directory of Latin Americanists. Since 1966, when it was first published, the directory has served as the basic reference tool for biographical and bibliographical data on Latin Americanist scholars in the social sciences and the humanities.

For the new edition, the scope has been broadened to encompass specialists in Latin American agriculture and natural resources management, as well as those physical and biological scientists who actively define themselves as Latin Americanists through participation in a Latin American studies program or association. The core of the directory, however, will continue to be scholars in the social sciences and the humanities.

A new edition of the directory is needed, given the increase in the number of Latin Americanists in the United States since the second edition was published in 1971. As with the previous directories, the new edition will provide basic biographical and bibliographical data and will detail work experience, research interests, and current addresses for each individual included.

The directory will facilitate communication among professionals in the field and serve as a useful compendium for research and teaching institutions, development organizations, and national and international agencies in their search for scholars with Latin American expertise.

At present the staff of the Directory Project is still acquiring names and addresses of individuals who should be considered for inclusion in the new edition of the directory. Scholars whose work or research deals with countries of the Latin American region who have not yet received the National Directory of Latin Americanists questionnaire are requested to write for a copy to Inge M. Harman, Library of Congress, Hispanic Division, National Directory Project, Washington, D.C. 20540. □

Guides Catalogue Study and Travel Abroad

The Institute of International Education offers an annual The Learning Traveler series to guide study and travel abroad.

U.S. College-Sponsored Programs Abroad: Academic Year describes over 800 semester and academic year programs abroad sponsored by accredited U.S. colleges and universities. The companion volume, Vacation Study Abroad, describes over 900 foreign study programs, ranging from three days to three months and organized between April and October, sponsored by U.S. colleges and universities, foreign institutions and private U.S. and foreign organizations. Most programs include either optional travel or built-in time for exploring the country.

The program descriptions in both volumes offer information on when, where, and how long the programs are; pre-session orientation; course descriptions including prerequisites, credit, teaching methods, language of instruction; housing; costs; scholarships, work-study; and program evaluation.

Each volume costs $8. To order a copy of either Vacation Study Abroad or U.S. College-Sponsored Programs Abroad: Academic Year, send a check for $8 plus 75¢ postage and handling per book ordered ($1.50 for first-class handling) to Communications Division, Box LT-E, Institute of International Education, 809 United Nations Plaza, New York, New York 10017.

Book Drive Launched

For Tanzanian Institute

The National Institute of Public Management (NIPM) has launched a drive to obtain donation of 1,000 recently published textbooks, monographs and other reference works in public administration, business administration, political science, management theory and economics for the Institute of Development Management (IDM), Mzumbe, Tanzania. A special emphasis is placed on materials approaching their subject from an international and comparative perspective.

On a recent lecture tour of several African countries, NIPM/IIPM President Philip J. Rutledge was struck by the paucity and obsolescence of texts for library and teaching purposes at IDM particularly, whose dedicated staff is performing heroically against great odds. Co-Chairman of the drive is Charles F. Bonser of Indiana University, who is also Program Chairman of NIPM/IIPM.

Persons or institutions wishing to contribute books or other reference materials to IDM may send them directly to Professor C. J. Nyoni, Public Management Chairman, Institute of Development Management, P.O. Box 1, Mzumbe, Tanzania, or to Victoria Rose, Cultural Affairs Officer, American Embassy-Dar Es Salaam, Department of State, Washington, D.C. 20520. Books may also be sent to NIPM for forwarding.

Further information may be obtained by writing or calling Rutledge at National Institute of Public Management, 1625 Eye Street, N.W., Suite 1002, Washington, D.C. 20006; (202) 887-0450.

APSR Back Issues

Available, 1955-1978

Douglas E. Ashford, Department of Government, Cornell University, Ithaca, New York 14853, has a collection of the APSR from vol. 49, 1955, to vol. 72, 1978, which he would like to sell, preferably as a whole set for $200. Volumes for specific years may be sold at a prorated price.

Country Specialists File

Creates Expertise Bank

The Foreign Affairs Information Service is establishing a Country Specialists Referral File (CSRF) of U.S. scholars with academic and/or professional interests in countries and regions of the world outside the United States. CSRF will be a computerized and continuously updated

The Advisory Opinion No. 3 (Permission to Reprint) was revised on April 30, 1977. The Opinion now reads:

ADVISORY OPINION NO. 3
REPRINT PERMISSION POLICY
(October 11, 1969, revised April 30, 1977)

These guidelines apply primarily to anthologies or books of readings and do not diminish an author's right to quote from another scholar's work under the concept of "fair use."

Material to be reprinted should be clearly and fully identified. Any work reprinted may be changed only with the specific consent of the author.

The obtaining of legal permission to reprint from the copyright holder does not exempt the user from the ethical responsibility of informing the original writer in a timely manner that the material is to be reprinted, and an acknowledgement of the notification should be requested of the original writer.

The editor or user of material to be reprinted has an obligation to notify the original writer. Such notification should be sent to the academic affiliation of the writer with a request that it be forwarded to any new or temporary academic address. This notification should precisely describe the material intended for use and the specifications of the work in which it will appear.

Publishers are encouraged to make appropriate model reprint intent notifications available to editors of readers and other users. It is suggested that a sample of such a notification be included in the Publisher's "Guide to Authors."

If no response is received within three weeks of the sending of the initial notification the Associations agree that the editor's "good faith" responsibility has been fulfilled with the sending of a second notice describing the intended use.

The copyright holder and the author are each entitled to a flat fee or a share of royalties in connection with permissions to reprint, specific terms depending on agreement with the party seeking permission. Either the copyright holder or the author may waive his rights. Each may act on his own behalf, or by mutual consent one may act on behalf of both.

Permissions must be renewed, and financial agreements are subject to renegotiation whenever a book goes into a new edition.

Any author is entitled to a complimentary copy of any publication in which his or her work is reprinted.
