Anna Alexandrova (aaalexan@ucsd.edu) is a Ph.D. candidate in Philosophy and Science Studies at the University of California, San Diego. She also completed an MSc in Philosophy of the Social Sciences at the London School of Economics. Her doctoral thesis (under the supervision of Nancy Cartwright) explores inductive and deductive strategies of causal inference in contemporary social science.

S. M. Amadae is an assistant professor in the Graduate Faculty of Political and Social Science at the New School University, New York. She has recently published Rationalizing Capitalist Democracy: The Cold War Origins of Rational Choice Liberalism (University of Chicago Press, 2003)

Maarten Franssen is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the Technical University of Delft in The Netherlands. During the past ten years he has worked on issues in decision and game theory, social choice, and the foundations of the social sciences. His current interests concern the application of decision and game theory to design methodology and the application of formal methods from the social sciences to the modeling of large technological systems.

Natalie Gold is a doctoral student in economics at Oxford University. She investigates individual and collective decisionmaking, using methods from a variety of disciplines including economics, philosophy, and psychology. In particular, she is interested in the incorporation of developments in cognitive science into social scientific theories. She is editor of Teamwork: Multi-Disciplinary Perspectives (Palgrave Mcmillan forthcoming) and co-editor (with Robert Sugden) of Michael Bacharach's book Beyond Individual Choice: Teams and Frames in Game Theory (Princeton University Press forthcoming). Her email is natalie.gold@balliol.oxford.ac.uk.

Axel Gosseries is an Associate Research Fellow of the Fonds National de la Recherche Scientifique (Belgium), based at the Chaire Hoover D'Éthique Économique et Sociale (Louvain). He holds an LL.M. (London 1996) and a Ph.D. in Philosophy (Louvain 2000). His research interests include intergenerational justice, the ethical assessment of tradable quotas schemes and the respective obligations of firms and states. He has just published Penser la Justice Entre les Générations (Paris: Aubier 2004).

Till Gruene obtained his Ph.D. from the London School of Economics and he taught there as a tutorial fellow from 2002 to 2003. He is currently a postdoctoral researcher at the Royal Institute of Technology (KTH) in Stockholm. His research focuses on the philosophy of economics and decision theory.

Shaun P. Hargreaves Heap teaches at the University of East Anglia. Much of his research has been on rationality in a social and historical setting and most recently this has taken an experimental turn. He is now working in a new area, the economics of film and television.

Luc Lauwers is Associate Professor at the Katholieke Universiteit Leuven. His research focuses on social choice theory and on cooperative game theory. He can be contacted at Luc.Lauwers@econ.kuleuven.ac.be.

David M. Levy is Professor of Economics at George Mason University. His work over the years has been concerned with how language changes behavior if not motivation.

Christian List is Lecturer in Political Science at the London School of Economics. He is author of a number of articles, including "Are interpersonal comparisons of utility indeterminate?" (Erkenntnis 2003), "Social choice theory and deliberative democracy: a reconciliation" (with John Dryzek, British Journal of Political Science, 2003), "Aggregating sets of judgments: an impossibility result" (with Philip Pettit, Economics and Philosophy, 2002), "Epistemic democracy: generalizing the Condorcet Jury Theorem" (with Robert E. Goodin, Journal of Political Philosophy, 2001). His email is c.list@lse.ac.uk.

Robert Northcott (r.d.northcott@lse.ac.uk) is completing his Ph.D. in Philosophy at the London School of Economics under the supervision of Colin Howson. He received a BA in Mathematics and History from University of Cambridge and an MSc in Economics from LSE. Currently a visiting scholar at the University of California, San Diego, he works in philosophy of science and causation.

Sandra J. Peart is Professor of Economics at Baldwin-Wallace College. Her recent work, with David Levy, has looked at how the classical economists' ideas of equality and undirected choice were assailed throughout the late nineteenth century. The Peart-Levy book From Equality to Hierarchy: The Vanity of the Philosopher in Post-Classical Economics, is in press at the University of Michigan Press.

Deborah Tollefsen (dtollfsn@memphis.edu) is an Assistant Professor at the University of Memphis. She received her Ph.D. from Ohio State University in 2002. Her areas of interest include social epistemology, social ontology, and philosophy of mind. Recent publications include "Organizations as true believers" (Journal of Social Philosophy 2002), and "Participant reactive attitudes and collective responsibility" (Philosophical Explorations, forthcoming).

Peter Vallentyne is Florence G. Kline Professor of Philosophy at the University of Missouri-Columbia. He has written on the metaphysics of laws and properties, moral dilemmas, the moral status of children, infinite utility, egalitarianism, libertarianism, and consequentialism. He edited Contractarianism and Rational Choice: Essays on the Work of David Gauthier (1991), co-edited with Hillel Steiner

The Origins of Left-Libertarianism: An Anthology of Historical Writings (2001) and Left-Libertarianism and its Critics: The Contemporary Debate (2001), and edited the six-volume anthology Equality and Justice (2003). He is currently working on a defense of a version of left-libertarianism (which combines self-ownership with egalitarianism). He can be contacted at Vallentynep@missouri.edu.

T. M. Wilkinson is a Senior Lecturer in Population Health and Philosophy at the University of Auckland. He is the author of Freedom, Efficiency and Equality (Palgrave 2000) and articles on a diverse selection of topics. His current focus is on the ethics of organ transplantation.
