THE COMPOSITION OF PLATO'S APOLOGY

By R. HACKFORTH. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

The purpose of this book is to determine the relation of the "Apology" of Plato to the actual speech delivered by Socrates at his trial. The author's justification for it is the wide variation of opinion which at present prevails; e.g. Burnet and Professor A. E. Taylor incline to the view that Plato gives a true and faithful reproduction of Socrates' own speech. A contrary view is held by some of the continental scholars, and was put forward by Professor Bury in his Selected Essays, published in 1930.

"Professor J. Holland Rose, in his new book, deals with the growth of maritime power and the importance of the Mediterranean in the development of ancient civilisation. . . . A fascinating and learned book."
