OTHER ACTIVITIES

The Social Science Research Council's annual announcement describing fellowships and grants to be awarded in 1962-63 will be ready for distribution in early September. It will list the following programs which are to be continued without major changes: Research Training Fellowships, predoctoral and postdoctoral; Faculty Research Fellowships; Grants-in-Aid of Research; Fellowships in Political Theory and Legal Philosophy; Grants for Research on American Governmental and Legal Processes.

International Conference Travel Grants will again be offered to American social scientists for travel to certain meetings outside North America.

Under joint sponsorship with the American Council of Learned Societies, grants will be offered to mature scholars for research in the social sciences and humanities on certain foreign areas. Grants for research on Africa South of the Sahara, on Latin America, and on the Near and Middle East (including North Africa) will be administered by the Social Science Research Council; while those for Asian Studies and for Slavic and East European Studies will be administered by the American Council of Learned Societies, to which correspondence relating to the latter programs should be directed.

Inquiries and requests for the detailed announcement when issued may be addressed to the Social Science Research Council, Fellowships and Grants, 230 Park Avenue, New York 17, New York.

Applications for some categories of awards will be due not later than November 1.

An Inter-university Consortium for Political Research has been created by a group of cooperating universities and the Survey Research Center of the University of Michigan to promote graduate research training and to facilitate basic research on politics. The Consortium was formally established during a two-day conference at Ann Arbor, Michigan, June 1 and 2. Representatives from some twenty departments of political science met with members of the staff of the Survey Research Center of the University of Michigan and agreed upon a tentative mode of organization and a set of operating principles to guide the new organization during its first years of operation.

The Consortium represents an innovation in academic organization in the social sciences. Although it was not modelled on existing natural science counterparts, it shares with them the feature of being an association of institutions organized for cooperation around the more or less unique facilities of a research organization. The ultimate objective of the ICPR is to stimulate basic research on problems of politics and government. Advanced training in social science research methodology and in the methods and techniques of political analysis will be formally organized for faculty members as well as advanced graduate students from the participating schools. Research conferences devoted to the consideration of new problems in theory construction and data collection and interpretation in such areas as legislative behavior, judicial behavior and the historical analysis of aggregative data will be developed for participating faculty members.

Both the research and the training aspects of ICPR activity will be developed initially around the facilities of the University of Michigan Survey Research Center. One of the important goals of the organization is to increase access to the archival and instructional facilities of the Center and to enable the profession to make more efficient use of the data repository created at SRC through its research program in political behavior. The research materials already collected by SRC, including not only the data from six national election surveys but also election statistics, census materials and congressional roll call records, will be augmented by new data collections undertaken by Consortium participants and by the addition of other collections of data already in existence elsewhere.

The ICPR staff will also undertake to provide a clearing house facility for the individual participants. Communications among American researchers sharing common research interests and with foreign research scholars and their institutions abroad will be improved through a newsletter and other forms of current research reports. As with the research conferences, the clearing house activities will attempt to speed up the dissemination of new ideas and information among interested scholars, reduce inadvertent duplication of efforts and facilitate the pooling of intellectual resources committed to research in political science.

Each of the participating schools will be represented at an annual meeting of the Committee of Representatives. A five-man Council will be responsible for overseeing Consortium activities throughout the year. At the June meeting the Committee of Representatives elected James Prothro, University of North Carolina, as its chairman; the other four Council members, elected at the same time, are: David Easton, University of Chicago; Robert Lane, Yale University; Austin Ranney, University of Illinois; and William Riker, University of Rochester. The Consortium staff is headed by Warren E. Miller, Survey Research Center, as Executive Director and includes two other SRC staff members, Donald Stokes and Philip Converse, as Associate Directors. Membership in the ICPR is limited to the institutional participation of institutions of higher education; special provision for participation by persons not affiliated with a member institution may be made by the Council upon request by the individual. The current list of member institutions is Cornell University, The University of Chicago, University of Florida, Georgetown University, University of Illinois, State University of Iowa, The University of Kansas, The University of Michigan, Michigan State University, University of Minnesota, The University of North Carolina, Northwestern University, University of Oregon, Princeton University, The University of Rochester, University of California at Los Angeles, Vanderbilt University, Washington University, Wayne State University, The University of Wisconsin, and Yale University. Inquiries concerning membership or individual participation should be addressed to Warren E. Miller, Executive Director, ICPR, Survey Research Center, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

The United States Department of State and the Hoover Institution at Stanford University are publishing jointly A Catalog of Files and Microfilms of the German Foreign Ministry Archives, 1920-1945.

This Catalog, consisting of three volumes, will list for the period 1920 to 1945 all files from the political archives of the German Foreign Ministry that were seized by the American and British armies at the end of World War II. It will continue and complete the work of the Catalog of German Foreign Ministry Files and Microfilms, 1867-1920 which was published by the American Historical Association in 1959.

The Catalog will include the title, number, and date of all files contained in the archives, and the corresponding serial and frame numbers of those files that were microfilmed. It was compiled and prepared for printing by Dr. George O. Kent of the Historical Office of the Department of State, and its publication and distribution will be financed by the Hoover Institution. Volume I is scheduled to be published in the summer of 1962. The remaining volumes are scheduled to appear, respectively, late in 1962 and in 1963.

A major accomplishment in the flow of foreign scholarly and cultural publications to American libraries was hailed in the Library of Congress last May 23, with an informal meeting signaling the first receipt of some 200,000 items that have been purchased since January in India, Pakistan and the United Arab Republic, with the U. S.-owned foreign currencies under the new Library of Congress Public Law 480 program. Congressman John D. Dingell of Michigan sponsored the amendment, P. L. 85-931, that authorized this trade of food for thought, in aid of the acquisition of foreign publications for selected American research centers.

The Max Weber Centennial Commission has been established in order to mark the year 1964 as the one-hundredth anniversary of the birth of the German social scientist by focusing attention on Weber's impact on the social sciences.

The Commission is designed to coordinate the efforts of cooperating institutions of higher learning and academic organizations by arranging visiting professorships, exchange lectureships, seminars, and institutes. It is intended that special attention will be given to social science problems in the areas of Weber's interests. The activities of the Commission will culminate in a symposium scheduled for April, 1964, in Kansas City.
