

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

EDUARDO ALEMÁN is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Houston in Texas. He holds a PhD in Political Science and a Master's degree in Latin American Studies, both from the University of California, Los Angeles. His current research focuses on legislative institutions, political parties in Latin America, and constitutional political economy.

AMY BELLONE HITE is an Assistant Professor of Sociology at Xavier University of Louisiana and Visiting Scholar at Tulane University's Stone Center for Latin American Studies. She coedited From Modernization to Globalization (Blackwell, 2000) with J. Timmons Roberts, with whom she is collaborating for two other edited volumes: one on environmental sustainability in Latin America and another on globalization and development, emphasizing counter-hegemonic movements.

ANNE-EMANUELLE BIRN is Canada Research Chair in International Health and Associate Professor of International Development Studies at the University of Toronto. Her research focuses on the history of public health, women's health, and infant mortality in Mexico and Uruguay and on the politics of international health policy in Latin America. Her forthcoming book is entitled Marriage of Convenience: The Rockefeller Foundation, International Health, and Revolutionary Mexico (University of Rochester Press, 2005).

TAYLOR C. BOAS is a doctoral candidate in Political Science at the University of California, Berkeley. His dissertation examines the transformation of political communication and campaigning in Latin America and will involve field research during the upcoming presidential elections in Chile, Peru, and Brazil. He has also done research on the role of the Internet in authoritarian regimes and is coauthor of Open Networks, Closed Regimes: The Impact of the Internet on Authoritarian Rule (Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, 2003).

DAVID WILLIAM FOSTER is Regents Professor of Spanish, Women's Studies, and Interdisciplinary Humanities at Arizona State University. His research focuses on urban cultural production in Latin America, especially Argentina. He is the co-author, with Manuel de Jesús Hernández-Gutiérrez of Chicano Literature: An Anthology in Spanish, English, and Caló, and his monograph En el Ambiente Nuestro: Essays on Chicano/Latino Homoerotic Writing is forthcoming with the Bilingual Press.

LAURA B. FRANKEL is a candidate for the MPhil in Development Studies at Wolfson College of the University of Oxford. Her research interests include the political economy of Cuban development both before and after the revolution. In 2002 she received her BA in Government from Wesleyan University, where she was awarded the Davenport Prize for Excellence in Government.

W. JOHN GREEN received his PhD in Latin American history from the University of Texas at Austin. He has taught at several institutions, including Virginia Tech and the Universidad Nacional de Colombia, Bogotá. He is currently a Senior Research Fellow at the Council of Hemispheric Affairs in Washington, D.C., a Colombia country specialist for Amnesty International USA, and a columnist for the online publication ColombiaWeek. His book Gaitanismo, Left Liberalism, and Popular Mobilization in Colombia (University Press of Florida, 2003) was named a Choice magazine "Outstanding Academic Title." His current project is a history of political murder in modern Latin America.

RYAN LONG is Assistant Professor of Spanish at the University of Oklahoma. His research interests include the Mexican Student Movement of 1968 and contemporary Mexican narrative. He has recently edited a special issue of the South Central Review titled "Memory and Nation in Contemporary Mexico," and is currently writing a book on 1968 and the Mexican novel.

JAMES W. MCGUIRE is Professor in the Department of Government at Wesleyan University. He is the author of Peronism Without Perón: Unions, Parties, and Democracy in Argentina (Stanford, 1997) and of Politics, Policy, and Mortality Decline in East Asia and Latin America (under review).

MICHAEL MONTEÓN is Professor of History at the University of California, San Diego. He is the author of Chile in the Nitrate Era: The Evolution of Economic Dependence, 1880–1930 (Wisconsin, 1982) and Chile and the Great Depression: The Politics of Underdevelopment, 1927–1948 (Tempe, Latin American Studies Center, 1998). He has published articles on Latin America related to its modern labor history, underdevelopment, debt crises, and women's history. He is working on a survey of Latin America during the twentieth century and a study of Mexico during the era of Plutarco Elías Calles.

ALFRED P. MONTERO is Associate Professor of Political Science at Carleton College. His research focuses on the political economy of decentralization in Latin America and Europe. He is the author of Shifting States in Global Markets: Subnational Industrial Policy in Contemporary Brazil and Spain (Penn State University Press, 2002) and coeditor with David Samuels of Decentralization and Democracy in Latin America (University of Notre Dame Press, 2004). He has also published his work in Latin American Politics and Society, Comparative Politics, Studies in Comparative International Development, Publius: The Journal of Federalism, Latin American Research Review and the Journal of Interamerican Studies and World Affairs.

JAVIER NÚÑEZ has his PhD from the University of Oxford. He is Assistant Professor of Economics in the Department of Economics at the Universidad de Chile. His primary areas of research include the economic history of Chile, economic development, and political economy. He is currently undertaking research on class discrimination, inequality, and social mobility in Chile in the last decades.

GEORGE PHILIP has taught Latin American politics at the London School of Economics since 1976, where he is now convenor of the Government Department. He is the author of six books on Latin America, of which the most recent is Democracy in Latin America: Surviving Conflict and Crisis? (Polity Press, 2003). His current research interest is in civil service reform in Latin America, particularly in Mexico.

DAVID ROCK is Professor of History at University of California, Santa Barbara. He is the author of several works on the history of Argentina including: Politics in Argentina, 1890-1930 (Cambridge University Press, 1975); Argentina 1517-1987 (University of California Press, 1988); Authoritarian Argentina (University of California Press, 1993); State Formation and Political Movements in Argentina, 1860-1916 (Stanford University Press, 2002). He has also contributed several articles to the Cambridge History of Latin America.

DONALD F. STEVENS is Head of the Department of History and Politics at Drexel University and editor of The Americas: A Quarterly Journal of Inter-American Cultural History. He is working on a history of Mexican culture, religion, and politics at the time of the cholera epidemic of 1832.

CHARLES TATUM is Professor of Spanish and Dean of the College of Humanities at the University of Arizona. Tatum is the author of a monographic study Chicano Literature (Twayne, 1982)—published in translation in Mexico in 1986—and coauthor of Not Just for Children: The Mexican Comic Book in the Late 1960s and 1970s (Greenwood Press, 1992). He is senior cofounder and senior coeditor of the journal Studies in Latin American Popular Culture. He is editor of three volumes of New Chicana/Chicano Writing (1991-1993) for the University of Arizona Press and coeditor of a volume of essays, Recovering the U.S. Hispanic Literary Heritage, Vol. II. His most recent publication is a book, Chicano Popular Culture (The University of Arizona Press, 2001). It was selected as a "Best of the Best of the University Presses" book by the American Association of American Presses. Tatum serves on the advisory board of the Recovering the U.S. Hispanic Literary Heritage Project and is a member of an editorial board for two anthologies of U.S. Hispanic literature: Herencia (Oxford University Press, 2001) and En otra voz. Antología de la literatura hispana en los Estados Unidos (Arte Público Press, 2002). He is currently completing his second book on Chicano literature.

GEORGE TSEBELIS is Professor of Political Science at the University of California, Los Angeles. He is a specialist on game theoretic methods and political institutions. He is author of Nested Games: Rational Choice in Comparative Politics (University of California Press, 1990), Bicameralism (with Jeannette Money, Cambridge University Press, 1997), and Veto Players: How Political Institutions Work (Princeton University Press, 2002).

JOCELYN S. VITERNA is Assistant Professor of Sociology and Latin American Studies at Tulane University. Her current research focuses on women's political activism in El Salvador.

BRIAN WAMPLER is Assistant Professor of Political Science at Boise State University. He received his PhD in Government from the University of Texas at Austin (2000). He has published articles on civil society organizations and participatory democracy in Comparative Politics (with Leonardo Avritzer), Latin American Politics and Society and Cadernos de Estudos Sociais. He is currently revising a book manuscript on participatory democratic institutions in Brazil.