NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

C. RICHARD BATH is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Texas at El Paso. He has spent several years of research in Bolivia and traveled widely in Latin America. Published journal articles include works on law of the sea and Mexican border affairs.

DILMUS D. JAMES is Associate Professor of Economics and Finance at the University of Texas at El Paso. He has authored a book and articles on various aspects of science and technology policy in developing countries.

WILBER A. CHAFFEE is Visiting Assistant Professor at the University of Texas at Austin. His other publications and research include both Latin America and Southeast Asia.

PATRICIA WEISS FAGEN is Associate Professor at New College, San José State University. She is the author of Exiles and Citizens, Spanish Republicans in Mexico, and has written on university modernization in Chile. Her present focus of interest is on questions of ideology and history.

MITCHELL A. SELIGSON is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Arizona. He was recently in Costa Rica conducting research on the impact of communal versus individual landownership on peasant attitudes toward fertility and politics. He is completing a book entitled The Peasant and Agrarian Capitalism in Costa Rica.

JOHN A. BOOTH is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Texas at San Antonio. He is currently doing research and writing on several aspects of political participation in Costa Rica and Latin America in general, and is joint coordinator, with Professor Seligson, of the coming conference on "The Faces of Participation in Latin America."

PAUL E. SIGMUND is Professor of Politics at Princeton University. In 1967 he was a Visiting Professor at the Catholic University of Chile in Santiago. His most recent book is The Overthrow of Allende and the Politics of Chile, 1964–1974 (in press).

WILLIAM GLADE, Professor of Economics at the University of Texas at Austin, also directs the Institute of Latin American Studies there. His special research interests focus on the role of the public sector in development and integration.

CARL E. SOLBERG is Associate Professor of History at the University of Washington. He is the author of Immigration and Nationalism: Argentina and Chile, 1890–1914, and currently is researching twentieth-century Argentine social and economic history.
