New Books from Harvard Divinity School Scholars

How to Read the Bible* by Hollis Research Professor of Divinity
Harvey Cox (Harper Collins, April 2015, $26.99)

Renowned religion expert Harvey Cox deepens our experience of the Bible, revealing the three primary ways we read it, why each is important, and how we can integrate these approaches for a richer understanding of the Old and New Testaments.

- Literary—as narrative stories of family conflict, stirring heroism, and moral dilemmas
- History—as classic texts with academic and theological applications
- Activism—as a source of dialogue and engagement to be shared and applied to our lives.

Being Human in a Buddhist World: An Intellectual History of Medicine in Early Modern Tibet* by Hershey Professor of Buddhist Studies Janet Gyatso (Columbia University Press, January 2015, $45.00)

Being Human critically explores the intersection of early modern sensibilities and religious values in traditional Tibetan medicine. It studies the adaptation of Buddhist concepts and values to medical concerns, suggests important dimensions of Buddhism's role in the development of Asian and global civilization, and traces a strategically astute dialectic between scriptural and empirical authority on questions of history and the nature of human anatomy.

Medieval Christianity: A New History* by Winn Professor of Ecclesiastical History Kevin Madigan (Yale University Press, January 2015, $40.00)

For many, the medieval Western world seems dark and foreign—an often brutal and seemingly irrational time of superstition, miracles, and strange relics. Yet the medieval world produced much that is part of our world today. This new narrative history of medieval Christianity, spanning the period 500 to 1500 CE, introduces new themes and narratives: the role of women in Christianity, the relationships among Christians, Jews, and Muslims, the experience of ordinary parishioners, and instruction through drama, architecture, and art.
