

INTERNATIONAL LEGAL MATERIALS®

Statement of Editorial Policy

International Legal Materials is a core publication of The American Society of International Law that reproduces documents reflecting the broad scope and evolution of international law. The range of covered subjects has expanded from traditional topics such as international organizations, jurisdiction, maritime law and trade to include developments in fields such as electronic commerce, environmental law, human rights and war crimes jurisprudence.

International Legal Materials serves as both a bi-monthly information service and a widely recognized archive of international law documents for a diverse, global community of legal scholars, government officials, private practitioners and institutions sharing a common interest in international law. To meet the varied demands of such a readership, documents are selected from world-wide sources on the basis of their present and future legal significance. For this reason, purely political or issue-advocacy documents are excluded from consideration, as are draft laws not in final form or having a unique, lasting character.

International Legal Materials is prepared for publication in Washington, D.C. by a staff of Attorney-Editors acting with both the advice of the Editorial Advisory Committee, and the assistance of its Corresponding Editors around the world. In order to reproduce selected documents under tight production schedules, the best available source is used, whether electronic or printed. Because of this method, translations are usually unofficial and should not be considered authoritative unless otherwise indicated.

Volume 39 reflects an ever-increasing use of automated production methods designed to ensure a high-quality, standardized product. These new techniques also make possible the creation of an expanded and integrated family of International Legal Materials publications centered on the ASIL Website. We look forward to announcing these products as they become available.

Guidelines for Submission of Documents

Readers are invited to submit documents that would be of interest to the international legal community. International Legal Materials reproduces the official text of a document whenever possible. The source of the document, e.g., a government ministry, a court, an embassy, or an official gazette, should be clearly identified.

If the official version is not available in English, an unofficial translation is acceptable. The original text must accompany unofficial English translations.

Introductory Notes

Introductory Notes are brief articles — no more than one or two pages — intended to provide background information for the document they accompany. They should be objective, without subjective commentary. An Introductory Note for a treaty might include a short history of the negotiations, the dates of signature and entry into force. One for legislation would give its history and international significance, while one for judicial proceedings would provide the background of the case and a citation to the full text in the original language.

Introductory Notes are solicited after the underlying document has been selected for publication in International Legal Materials.

Submissions should be single-spaced with double-spacing between paragraphs. Authors and translators must send copies of their submission as an e-mail attachment or on a PC-compatible diskette in either WordPerfect or Word format. ILM uses WordPerfect. A statement containing the author's name, title, address, telephone and fax numbers must accompany all submissions. If available, an e-mail address is appreciated.

Acceptance of Materials and Corrections

Submissions cannot be returned. Translators and others submitting material will be notified of the acceptance of their document for publication.

Once a submission has been accepted for reproduction, The American Society of International Law will send a publication agreement. Translators and Introductory Note Authors will be acknowledged in ILM. In some cases minor editorial or typographical alterations may be made without contacting the author or translator. Major corrections will be sent to the author or translator for approval. Corrected Introductory Notes or translations must be returned within the time specified.
