

Recently Published by The British Institute of International and Comparative Law

CITIZENSHIP: THE WHITE PAPER

Edited by J.P. Gardner

Citizenship, what it means and how it matters, is a central topic in legal reform, in the development of Europe and in the maintenance of democracy. In English law citizenship is traditionally an external matter - linked to nationality and the right of abode. But citizenship also has an internal dimension of involvement within the State. Research has identified the hallmarks of citizenship by comparing the key features of citizenship in European countries, and the White Paper now presents a short description of those rights and duties which bind the citizen and the State in England and Wales.

The topics range from voting, through litigation to paying taxes and performing jury service, and with Chapters on gender treatment, corporate and European citizenship as well as the role of citizenship in the emerging democracies of central Europe, this is a first step towards systematising an area of law of growing importance.

ISBN 0 903067 75 7 Hdbk. 416 pp + xiii £35

To Order please contact Tristian Preston, Publications Dept.,
British Institute of International and Comparative Law, Charles
Clore House, 17 Russell Square, London WC1B 5DR. Tel. +44
(171) 636 5802. Fax. +44 (171) 323 2016. Email:
BIICL@dial.pipex.com