WORKING AT ARCHAEOLOGY

LEWIS R. BINFORD

Binford evaluates the development of archaeological theory and methodology during the 1970s and speculates on directions it may take in the 1980s. His coverage includes:

- paradigm growth and theory building
- interassemblage variability
- the Mousterian problem
- researching information

The volume concludes with comments on specific current views.

THE CLOUD PEOPLE DIVERGENT EVOLUTION OF THE ZAPOTEC AND MIXTEC CIVILIZATIONS

Edited by KENT V. FLANNERY and JOYCE MARCUS

A SCHOOL OF AMERICAN RESEARCH BOOK

Leading specialists in Oaxacan archaeology trace the evolution of the Zapotec and Mixtec peoples from a single hunting and gathering culture through a period of separate village farming societies to two divergently adapted and sometimes competing pre-Columbian states. The volume contains 100 chapters and covers such topics as:

- similarities and differences in subsistence-settlement systems
- social and political organization
- religion and cosmology in light of an evolutionary model.

The contributors provide explanations in terms of common ancestry, adaptive radiation, drift, parallel and convergent evolution, and the acculturative effects of neighboring cultures to the north and south.

BISON KILLS AND BONE COUNTS

Decision Making by Ancient Hunters

John D. Speth

Speth uses and refines "nutritional utility analysis" to explain the Garnsey bison kill site in southern New Mexico. His findings show that the prehistoric hunters were highly selective and efficient, discarding only those parts that were of least nutritional value. Speth's study both contributes to our knowledge of the subsistence activities of ancient hunters and gatherers and suggests methodological implications for all bone analysts in archeology.

Maya Archaeology

TIKAL REPORT NO. 12

Introduction to the Archaeology of Tikal, Guatemala

William R. Coe and William A. Haviland

The Tikal Project was one of the largest, most intensive and most carefully recorded archaeological investigations ever undertaken. This volume describes the procedures of field work, laboratory study and publication, summarizes the methods and philosophy of site restoration, lists all operations and Project staff publications, and illustrates the field years through an excellent series of photographs.

1982. xii + 100 pp., 25 illus., bibliography. Hardbound, $20.00.

TIKAL REPORT NO. 33

The Monuments and Inscriptions of Tikal, Part A: The Carved Monuments

Christopher Jones and Linton Satterthwaite

The handsome volume, eagerly awaited by those who wish to examine first-hand and within its archaeological contexts one of the great art styles and writing systems of the world, includes complete illustration of the monuments by line drawings and photographs, up-to-date decipherments of all calendric and historical passages, and the longest king-list yet assembled for a Maya site.

1982. xiv + 252 pp., 122 illus., bibliography. Hardbound, $55.00.

THE MONUMENTS AND INSCRIPTIONS OF CARACOL, BELIZE

Carl B. Beetz and Linton Satterthwaite

The monuments of Caracol, including some of the most beautiful and elaborately carved of the Classic Maya period, have until now remained relatively unknown. This new volume sets the record straight with a large set of beautiful drawings and decipherments of the interesting calendric and historical hieroglyphic texts.

1981. xiv + 188 pp., 43 illus., bibliography, site plan. Hardbound, $25.00.

QUIRIGUA REPORTS: I

Papers 1-5

Wendy Ashmore, ed.

Five separate papers in this volume serve as an important introduction to the recent archaeology of the Maya site of Quirigua, in Guatemala. They include discussion of the origins and objectives of the project, the work of the 1973-1976 seasons, control of lichen growth on the famous monuments, a new decipherment of Monument 12, and a new map of the site.

1979. ix + 73 pp., 24 illus., site core map. Softbound, $12.00.

The Sculpture of Palenque

Volume I: The Temple of the Inscriptions

MERLE GREENE ROBERTSON

"The finest record we have for the art of a Classic Maya site."—Michael D. Coe, Yale University

"This may be the most important visual tool to be contributed to Maya studies since Maudslay's publication at the beginning of the century. Since Palenque is one of the most important Maya sites, it is invaluable to have photographs and drawings with the clarity and detail of those presented here. The stylistic and technical observations about the sculpture are also of significance."

IN PURSUIT OF THE PAST

Decoding the Archaeological Record
By Lewis R. Binford

The founding father and principal exponent of the “New Archaeology” in the United States, Professor Lewis Binford is perhaps the most influential archaeological theoretician alive today. This provocative new book—illustrated with Binford’s own drawings and photographs, and written in an engaging, accessible style—provides a long-needed introduction to Binford’s invigorating ideas about the evolution of human society. With 150 illustrations. $18.50
